Fisk Going To Hall

No Red Sox fan will ever forget those lasting images of Carlton Fisk. A written description does not come close to doing justice to describing the actual images. But, it occurred in the 12th inning of Game Six of the 1975 World Series. Previously, in the eighth inning, Bernie Carbo hit a three-run, pinch-hit homer to tie the game. In the bottom of the 12th, Red Sox catcher Carlton Fisk stepped to the plate and sent the second pitch by Pat Darcy high in the air down the left field line. The scene that followed will forever be replayed and cherished by all baseball fans as Fisk waived his arms at the ball to stay fair. The ball hit the left field foul pole, setting off a wild celebration on the field and in the stands at Fenway Park. It endures as one of baseball's most dramatic and unforgettable moments.

On July 23, those images will race through the minds of everyone in the baseball world as Red Sox great and New England hero Carlton "Pudge" Fisk will be inducted into the National Baseball Hall of Fame. He becomes the ninth inductee to represent the Boston Red Sox in Cooperstown, New York, joining Joe Cronin, Bobby Doerr, Rick Ferrell, Jimmie Foxx, Lefty Grove, Harry Hooper, Ted Williams, and Carl Yastrzemski. He also becomes the just the 13th catcher in baseball ever to be enshrined at Cooperstown.

Not bad for a guy who grew up in Charlestown, New Hampshire, a small town of 800 people, playing 12 high-school games a year and dreaming of playing for the Red Sox. As Red Sox fans in New England say, "He's one of us."

"The Red Sox were a major part of my life and my career. I've been a New Englander all my life, and probably a Boston Red Sox fan longer than I can figure out. I was the Boston Red Sox when we played Home Run Derby in the backyard," recalled Fisk.

"I think that playing for the Red Sox I participated in a moment in baseball that I don't think I could possibly walk away from or divorce myself from — and that being the home run in the sixth game of the World Series."

At a media gathering at Fenway Park after the voting was announced, Fisk revealed that he will wear a Red Sox cap into the Hall of Fame. He remarked, "It's a very special moment, and the Red Sox are very special and always have been."

To have my life travel from Charlestown to Boston today...and I'm wearing this little pin right here that says Hall of Fame. That's a long way in a lot more ways than just geography may indicate. There haven't been many of us, and there probably will not be many of us that make that voyage from that part of the world. I'm glad that I was able to do it."

In this year's Hall of Fame balloting, cast by 10-year members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America, Fisk received 397 votes, 22 votes more than he needed. The year before, his first time on the ballot, Fisk finished only 43 votes shy of induction with 330 votes.

"It's very special and exciting to us when a member of the Red Sox Family is elected to the Cooperstown Hall of Fame," said Red Sox CEO and President John Harrington. "In this case, it has some added meaning with Carlton. He was drafted and developed within the Red Sox System, and he's been installed in our Red Sox Hall of Fame."

"We are very proud of Carlton and we are happy that he has come home to do some work with us," Harrington added. Fisk now holds the position of special assistant to Red Sox Executive Vice President and General Manager Dan Duquette.

Born in Bellows Falls, Vermont, Fisk was almost two years out of high school, attending the University of New Hampshire with a basketball scholarship, when the Red Sox selected him as their first pick in the 1967 Draft. Six years later, in 1972, he was the unanimous American League Rookie of the Year after batting .293 with 22 home runs and 61 RBI. That year, he also had 9 triples (tied-1st in AL), and a .538 slugging pct. (2nd in AL). He also won a Gold Glove in 1972 after leading the league in putouts and assists.

An 11-time All-Star, Fisk played in 2,499 games, including a Major League record 2,226 behind the plate. He holds the American League career catching records for most years (24), putouts (11,369), and total chances (12,417).

Overall, he hit 376 home runs, including a record 351 as a catcher. In his 24 seasons — 11 with Boston and 13 with the Chicago White Sox — he drove in 1,330 runs. He had eight 20-homer seasons and two 100-RBI seasons.

Fisk's numbers are all the more impressive because he battled through many injuries early in his career. He had reconstructive knee surgery in 1973, a broken arm in 1975, and then, in 1978, he suffered a serious elbow injury. He credits his New England roots for his ability to overcome those injuries.

"I've benefited from being a New Englander more often than it's come back at me to hit me in the head. My attitude and my stubbornness and my commitment...I don't think I would be standing here and be able to write 'HOF' after my name if I hadn't been as determined."

Last summer, Fisk was named one of the top 100 players of the century at the 1999 All-Star Game at Fenway Park. He caught Ted Williams's Ceremonial First Pitch at the All-Star Game, and then returned to make his own Ceremonial First Pitch before Game 4 of the 1999 American League Championship Series.

But induction into the Hall of Fame isn't the only honor Fisk will receive this summer.

"In recognition of Carlton's achievements and induction into the Hall of Fame, the club is going to plan a day in his honor," announced Duquette with Fisk at his side during a Fenway Park gathering the week of the announcement. "At that time, we are also going to retire his number...number 27. We don't have the date exactly yet, but we are looking forward to bringing him back so he can see our fans, and our fans can thank him."

Fisk will be the fifth Red Sox player to have his number retired, joining Joe Cronin (#4), Bobby Doerr (#1), Ted Williams (#9) and Carl Yastrzemski (#8).

"Carlton Fisk is an important member of the Red Sox family. His career is an important part of the Red Sox tradition. And we are so happy that he's back home with the Red Sox," concluded Duquette.

Fisk was understandably thrilled at the announcement. "It gives me goosebumps to think about it...I didn't think it all possible — that it ever could happen," he marveled. "But it's one of the most special moments in my career, to have that happen. Knowing that the criteria involved, for one, makes it impossible for the majority of the people to ever have it happen and, for two, the company that I will be with in those numbers that are retired are just so incredible."

According to Fisk, those memorable images from 1975, replayed so many times, did more than win a World Series game. It changed the way baseball — and baseball players — were perceived by the fans.

"It showed with the emotions released at that moment that players who play the game aren't just flat-faced people on baseball cards or TV or magazines, they are actually real people who play a game everybody loved growing up," Fisk said.

As much as fans remember him for that World Series moment, it is not necessarily what Fisk remembers as the crowning achievement of his long playing career. "Being able to carry the torch for the game is what I will cherish the most," stated Fisk. "I gave everything I had to the game. I feel very proud that I was a giver and not a taker."

And so the small-town boy from New England, who grew up dreaming of being a Red Sox and putting on a Red Sox uniform, will forever be remembered. As Carlton is inducted in July this summer, all of New England will remember not just the 1975 World Series moment, but also, the entire career of Pudge and think, "We're glad he's one of us."

Fisk announces he'll wear Red Sox cap into the Hall at a Fenway press conference

Hall of Fame Weekend is set for July 23-24, 2000 in Cooperstown. The Induction Ceremony, featuring the enshrinement of former Red Sox players Carlton Fisk and Tony Perez, as well as the candidates elected by the Veterans Committee, will take place on Sunday, July 23 at 1:30 PM at the Clark Sports Center, located on Susqueanna Avenue just one mile south of the Hall of Fame. There is no admission charge, and no tickets or reservations are required. 1999 RED SOX YEAR IN REVIEW

Red Sox celebrate after Division Series Game 4 win over Indians sending them to game 5 for dramatic series win

Maintaining A Perennial Championship-Caliber Team: The Red Sox were 94-68 in 1999 and captured the A.L. Wild Card for the second consecutive season. It was the first time the Red Sox did so since the World Championship seasons of 1915-16. The 94 wins were the most by the Sox since the 1986 A.L. Champions (95-66). The club had consecutive 90-win seasons for the first time since the 1977-78-79 Red Sox. The Red Sox also led the A.L. in ERA (4.00) for the first time since 1914. Since the start of three-division play in 1995, the club has a 435-357 (.549) record, 5th best in the majors. Over the past 23 years, since the advent of free agency in 1976 and the start of Jean R. Yawkey ownership, the Red Sox have won more games (2005) than any M. L. team except the Yankees (2091).

Spring Training: The Red Sox had 58 players participate in spring training camp in 1999.

Boston had the 3rd best record in Grapefruit League play (18-10-2 .643). The Red Sox have won 38 games the last two seasons (20-8 in 1998), which is their most combined wins in a two-year period since 1973. The Red Sox wrapped up the spring training season with two exhibition games at Colorado.

May Action: The Red Sox had a 20-8 record during May. The season-high 20 wins were the most games the Sox have won in a month since going 22-9 in August of 1996 and 20 wins was the most by the club in May since 21-7 in May Overall, during the five years that Duquette has assembled the ballclub (1995-99), the Red Sox have averaged 2,299,177 fans.

1986. The Sox began the month losing 3 of 4 games before winning 5 in a row, 8 of 9, 11 of 13 and 15 of 18. Boston won 6 of 7 from Toronto, swept a 3-game series from Anaheim and ended the month winning 4 in a row including a 3-game sweep in Cleveland. The month of May was also highlighted by Nomar Garciaparra's three homer, two grand slam, 10-RBI performance May 10th vs. Seattle. The club ended May with the 2nd most wins in the A.L. and were 1 1/2 games ahead of N.Y. in the A.L. East.

By The Numbers: The pitching staff led the M.L. with 12 shutouts and the A.L. with a 4.00 ERA, 1131 strikeouts, and a .253 batting average allowed. Boston's pitching staff led the A.L. in ERA for the first time since 1914 (2.35) and the sixth time overall. Sox hurlers also allowed the least runs (718), hits (1,396) and walks (469) in the league. The staff tied for the league lead in saves with 50 (with NYY) and had three pitchers with 10 or more saves for the first time in team history (Lowe & Wakefield - 15, Gordon - 11). The 12-5 (.706) record in shutouts was the best pct. in the A.L. and second in the M.L. only to Cin. (11-3 .786). The Red Sox offense ranked 7th in batting average (.278) and 9th in home runs (176) and runs scored (836). Boston outscored opponents 836 - 718 in 1999.

Sox batters also ranked 2nd in the A.L. in doubles with 334 (3rd all-time for the Sox). The 1999 Red Sox had nine players with 100 or more hits, tying a club record set in 1991. The Sox were 36-20 vs. the A.L. Central Div., 36-22 .621 in day games (led A.L.), 76-51 vs. RH starters and 18-17 vs. LH starters.

Meaningful Septembers & Octobers: The Red Sox clinched the A.L. Wild Card on Sept. 29 at Chicago (6-2 in 1st game of a DH). The Sox lost the first two games to Cleveland in the Division Series before winning Games 3 and 4 at Fenway Park. Game 4 was a 23-7 win in which the 23 runs and 24 hits set a M.L. post-season record. The Red Sox pulled out a dramatic 12-8 win in Game 5 to win the series. Boston appeared in the ALCS vs. N.Y. for the first since 1986. The Sox lost two 1-run contests in New York before winning Game 3 in Boston 13-1 led by Pedro Martinez, handing New York its worst post-season defeat and its only 1999 post-season loss. The Red Sox were eliminated from the playoffs after losing Games 4 and 5. Overall in 10 play-off games, the Sox outscored their opponents 68-55. The Red Sox collected 110 hits and batted .306 overall. In the Div. Series, Boston batted .318. The Sox pitching staff held the Indians and Yankees to .233 and .239 batting averages respectively.

In The Record Book: Pedro Martinez set a team record for the most strikeouts in a single season with 313. He also tied a M.L. record with 300 or more strikeouts in both leagues (joining R. Johnson). The Red Sox scored 11 runs in the 1st inning on June 26 vs. Chicago, the 27th time the club has scored 10 or more runs in one inning extending their own M.L. record.

Attendance At Friendly Fenway: In 1999, 2.4 million fans attended games at Fenway Park. It was the 13th straight full season the club exceeded two million fans at home. The 2,446,162 million fans that came to Fenway Park was the Sox 6th most ever. On the road, the team drew 2,395,593, 4th best in the A. L., the 10th straight full season and 13th time in which they surpassed 2 million on the road.

Fan Enthusiasm & Optimism Fueled The 2000 Red Sox Community Caravan

It was cold and snowy in mid-January around Boston, but Red Sox fans were thinking warm baseball-weather thoughts as they reflected on the memories of the tremendous 1999 Red Sox regular season and post-season. With those memories still fresh in fans' minds, their feelings of anticipation and optimism for the upcoming season only intensified as the Red Sox kicked-off the Third Annual Red Sox Community Caravan.

During the Caravan, co-sponsored by Coca-Cola, Red Sox players and personnel traveled to malls, hospitals, and schools in 12 different New England communities and towns, thanking fans for their loyalty and support. Red Sox fans, as they had in the previous two years, turned out by the thousands to meet their favorite players.

Red Sox players and personnel who made appearances during this year's Caravan included Darren Lewis, Donnie Sadler, Brian Rose, Rheal Cormier, John Valentin, Brian Daubach, Steve Lomasney, Cy Young Award Winner Pedro Martinez, Jose Offerman, newly-acquired centerfielder Carl Everett, coach Buddy Bailey, AL Manager of the Year Jimy Williams, and pitching coach Joe Kerrigan.

Fenway Park as the ticket office opened for regular season sales. Fans from all over New England lined up outside Fenway Park well before 7 AM to obtain tickets and also meet the Red Sox players on-hand. By the time the doors of the ticket office opened at 9 AM, there was a line of enthusiastic fans braving the bitter cold temperatures and stretching down Yawkey Way.

The results of that first day of sales at the box office is certainly an indication of fans' excitement for the 2000 Red Sox club, as an all-time first day record was set for ticket sales. Following a week of redsox.com, fax, mail order, and box office sales, and as the Red Sox Caravan traveled around New England, ten Red Sox home games sold out in record time.

"This was our best first day in ticket sales since 1989," remarked Red Sox VP of Sales and Marketing, Larry Cancro. "Sales almost doubled compared to last year's Ticket Office opening, and we are still receiving large numbers of orders from our touchtone ticketing system, mail, fax, and redsox.com sales. We are clearly off to our best start ever."

Red Sox fans in Florida were also flocking to buy tickets to City of Palms Park, the Red Sox Spring Training home in Fort Myers. The Fort Myers ticket office tied a record high for first-day of ticket sales set back in 1993, which was the first year that the Red Sox moved to Fort Myers for Spring Training. At 7 AM, the lines were already circling the building with fans anxious to show their support and enthusiasm for 2000 Red Sox squad.

In response to the overwhelming excitement and anticipation of Red Sox everywhere, Executive VP and General Manager Dan Duquette thanked fans for their loyalty and enthusiasm. "I want to thank fans on behalf of the entire organization for the overwhelming support they have already displayed for our 2000 team. We appreciate the tremendous loyalty that Red Sox fans have for our ballclub. The crowds that came out to meet the players during the Caravan stops and the incredible display on the first day of ticket sales are certainly an indication of the optimism and the excitement we all share for the upcoming season."

Red Sox fans' optimism and excitement has remained steadfast from the 1999 playoffs and intensified during the Red Sox Caravan. Now Spring Training is here and fans eagerly await the start of the 2000 Championship Season.

The Team Behind The Team

JOHN L. HARRINGTON

Chief Executive Officer

John L. Harrington, chief executive officer, began his 28th season as a member of Red Sox management in 2000, having joined the organization in 1973. In 1981, Mr. Harrington became a trustee of the Jean R. Yawkey Trust, which was a general partner of the Red Sox organization. The Jean R. Yawkey Trust then became the majority general partner of the Red Sox in 1987. Over the 13 years since 1987 when the Trust became the majority general partner, the team has appeared in post-season play five times, exceeded only by the Atlanta Braves, in all of Major League Baseball. Three of those post-season appearances have been within the past five years.

JOHN HARRINGTON

Since 1976, when the Jean R. Yawkey ownership commenced, the Red Sox have produced numerous competitive teams, all with a cumulative record of 2,005 wins and 1,759 losses, the second-best record in all of Major League Baseball entering 2000.

During Mr. Harrington's 28-year involvement, the Red Sox have significantly expanded and renovated Fenway Park with new grandstand roofing, seating, private suites, club seats, left-field wall, an electronic scoreboard, escalators, elevators and a parking garage as well as renovated restrooms, concession stands and front offices. In addition, the team moved its spring training headquarters in 1993 to a new state-of-the-art facility in Fort Myers, Florida.

Since 1986 Mr. Harrington has been very active in Major League Baseball. Presently, he is the vice-chairman of the Blue Ribbon Task Force for analyzing baseball's economic structure. He currently serves on MLB's prestigious Executive Council and is the chairman of the Realignment Committee. In 1995, the Realignment Committee proposed and implemented significant changes to the M.L. competitive structure, by the realignment of both leagues into three divisions with an expanded post-season playoff system and the participation of wild-card teams. In addition, the committee proposed and implemented a significant revision to the championship schedule of both leagues with the introduction of interleague games in 1997.

Mr. Harrington also was the chairman of the Expansion Committee which designated the last two expansion teams, co-chairman of the Labor Policy Committee and a member of the Revenue Sharing Committee and Strategic Planning Committee.

In addition to his sports interests, Mr. Harrington is a Certified Public Accountant and member of the American Institute of CPAs. Prior to entering baseball in 1970 as the controller at the American League of Professional Baseball, he was an assistant professor at the Graduate School of Management at Boston College. He earned his Bachelors degree from Boston College in 1957 and his Masters in 1966. Upon graduation, Mr. Harrington served three years as a commissioned naval officer traveling extensively throughout the world on a destroyer.

Currently he is a director of Hospitality Properties Trust and Senior Housing Trust, both NYSE Real Estate Investment Trusts. He is a former director of the New England Sports Network, Shawmut Bank NA and Fleet Bank NA.

He is affiliated with various charities and non-profit institutions serving as a director of the National Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, NY and the Baseball Assistance Team. He is also a trustee of Boston College, the Dana Farber Cancer Institute, the National Little League Foundation, the John F. Kennedy Library and Museum, the Boston Public Library Foundation, the Boston Catholic Charitable Bureau and the Archdiocese of Boston-Inner City Scholarship Foundation.

Mr. Harrington received honorary doctorate degrees from Suffolk University and Emmanuel College. He is an honorary member of the Boston College Hall of Fame and the Boston Park League Baseball Hall of Fame.

Born in the Jamaica Plain section of Boston, he currently resides in Westwood, MA with his wife, Maureen. They have three married children, Debra McNulty, Brian and Sean, along with six grandchildren.

DANIEL F. DUQUETTE

Executive Vice President and General Manager

Dan Duquette was named executive vice president and general manager of the Boston Red Sox on January 27, 1994. Under his leadership and guidance, the entire Red Sox baseball operation has undergone a renaissance. Duquette has successfully implemented a plan to provide Red Sox fans with a perennial contender by building superior minor league, player development and scouting systems, which produce players for the major league ballclub from within the system and provides depth of quality players so that the ballclub can acquire top players to help the big league club via trade. Also in the effort to build a perennial championship caliber ballclub, Duquette has successfully signed the best core Red Sox players to multi-year deals, ensuring that the key players will return each season to compete into the future.

DAN DUQUETTE

Three of the five Red Sox ballclubs that Dan has assembled since joining the Red Sox organization just prior to spring training in 1994, have earned the opportunity to participate in post-season play (1995, 1998, 1999), including the last two straight seasons, which was the first time since 1915-16 that the Red Sox have appeared in post-season play in consecutive years. Those Red Sox clubs have notched a combined 435-357 (.549) record, 78 games above .500. Since becoming a general manager with the Montreal Expos in September 1991, Dan has compiled a remarkable overall 690-540 (.561) record with the teams he has assembled.

Since the drafting of arguably baseball's best and most exciting short-stop, Nomar Garciaparra in 1994, and the acquisition and signing of baseball's most dominant pitcher in Pedro Martinez prior to the 1997 season, Duquette has built exciting and competitive major league ballclubs for Boston and has constructed one of baseball's best overall baseball operation. The Red Sox system provides a feeder system for the major league club with players rising through the system to the majors such as Nomar, OF Trot Nixon, INF Donnie Sadler, and INF Wilton Veras. The Red Sox system also produces skilled young talent that can be utilized to acquire top-caliber major leaguers, which was the case in November 1997, when the club acquired Pedro from Montreal in exchange for RHP Carl Pavano and this past off-season as the Red Sox acquired Carl Everett, one of the best offensive players in the NL, in exchange for Adam Everett.

Last season, the Red Sox drew over two million fans for the 13th straight full season. The 2,446,162 that attended home games in '99 was the 6th best total in Red Sox history. Overall, during the five years that Duquette has assembled the ballclub (1995-99), the Red Sox have averaged 2,299,177 fans.

In 1999 the Red Sox were the only organization to improve its overall minor league system's winning percentage every year since 1993 with an overall .526 (368-331) mark. The Red Sox winning pct. was the 6th best overall in baseball and the Red Sox are one of only four teams to have a combined minor league winning pct. above .500 for each of the last four years.

The last two ballclubs Duquette has assembled have won over 90 games. Last season the Red Sox earned a playoff berth, winning the American League Wild Card with a 94-68 (.580) record. In the playoffs, the Red Sox came back from a 2-game deficit to defeat the Indians in the Division Series with a dramatic fifth game victory on the road. The Red Sox then advanced to the League Championship Series against NY.

The 1998 Red Sox ended the regular season with 92 wins, second in the league to only one club, the club that went on to sweep the World Series. With its 92-70 record the 1998 club won the AL Wild Card and were the first Sox team since the 1986 AL Champions to win over 90 games (95-66).

During the 1998 season, Duquette also teamed up with Pedro Martinez and the Massachusetts Department of Public Health to launch a television and radio ad campaign to speak out against the use of tobacco by youngsters. The Red Sox received a "Healthy Life Style Award" from the Roxbury Comprehensive Community Health Center for their efforts.

In 1997 Duquette was presented with an Honor Award by the American Baseball Coaches Association (ABCA) for his "involvement in baseball and significant achievement in his profession." The Boston Jaycees also selected Duquette as one of Boston's Ten Outstanding Young Leaders in 1996.

In 1995, Duquette lowered the payroll considerably and assembled an American League Eastern Division Champion team after insightfully orchestrating a multitude of transactions and roster moves which brought 53 players overall, including a team-record 26 pitchers, onto the major league roster. The 1995 squad he assembled was alone in first place from May 13 through the end of the season and finished with an 86-58 .597 record. The Red Sox went from 7 games under .500 in 1994 (54-61) to 28 games over in 1995. After the season, the Boston Baseball Writers selected Duquette as Baseball's Executive of the Year. He also finished second in the voting for The Sporting News' Executive of the Year honors.

Before joining the Red Sox, Duquette was vice president and general manager of the Montreal Expos since September 19, 1991. At that time, he was the youngest G.M. in the major leagues. He joined the Expos on October 8, 1987 as director of player development, and was named assistant general manager on January 25, 1990. During his six years with Montreal, Dan was instrumental in assembling the contending Expos of 1992-94 with players such as Ken Hill, Mel Rojas, Larry Walker, John Wetteland and Marquis Grissom. From 1992-94 the Expos had one of the lowest payrolls and the best record in baseball over a three-year span (255-183 .582), including baseball's best record in 1994 (74-40).

Dan is a native of the Western Massachusetts town of Dalton, where he was a catcher and teammate of former Red Sox pitcher Jeff Reardon at Wahconah Regional High School. He played varsity baseball and football at Amherst College and earned a bachelor's degree in English Literature in 1980. He began his professional baseball career in July 1980 with the Milwaukee Brewers as an administrative assistant in scouting and player development. Dan was in the Brewers minor league and scouting departments for five years and was then named scouting director for the 1986 and 1987 seasons.

In 1992, Duquette was named The Sporting News Major League Executive of the Year in a vote conducted among 26 major league teams. He was also named the UPI National League Executive of the Year. Previously, Dan was a member of Baseball America's Organization of the Year five times, first with Milwaukee (1985-86-87) and then with Montreal (1988, 90). The Expos were honored as the 1993 Topps Major League Organization of the Year.

Dan currently serves on the Board of Directors of the Major League Baseball Scouting Bureau and is a member of the Major League Baseball Playing Rules Committee. He is also an active proponent of the Jimmy Fund, the United Way, the Genesis Fund, and Catholic Charities. In 1996, Dan and his wife, Sharon, chaired the most successful Cardinal Stewardship Appeal campaign ever.

Dan is also an avid alpine and cross-country skier. When Dan joined the Red Sox in 1994, he returned home to his native New England with his wife, Sharon (Brophy), who graduated from the University of New Hampshire, their daughter, Denise, and their two sons, Dan, Jr. and Dana.

A New Home For The Boston Red Sox

Since our last stay in Fort Myers, the Red Sox have announced plans to build a new ballpark in Boston right next door to 88-year old Fenway Park. The new ballpark honors our Fenway heritage by retaining its playing field, intimacy, and uniqueness, but provides fans with the amenities and comforts of modern ballparks. Most importantly, it adds 10,000 seats (without a single obstructed view!) so more people can enjoy Boston Red Sox baseball. The new ballpark does all that while moving home plate just 206 yards.

The ballpark has been designed by HOK, the architects of Camden Yards, Jacobs Field, and most of the other new ballparks that have helped baseball attract over 65 million fans a year to ballparks. You can check out a virtual tour and learn more about the new park, by logging on at www.redsox.com. Tell us what you think. Other fans have overwhelmingly approved of the new ballpark's design and location, with over 83% expressing support in a voter poll and over 90% support from incoming e-mails and brochures.

For the team, the new ballpark is essential to maintaining their competitiveness in an era when 26 of the 30 teams in the major leagues are either already playing in or moving towards new ballparks. Fenway is the oldest and smallest park in the majors and if the Red Sox are going to continue to compete in the American League East, we need to move forward.

And it's not just good for the team and the fans. The new ballpark, with its additional seating, will increase attendance by over 1 million new fans, a projected total of 3.2 million annually. The spending of those fans boosts the city and state economy, with some independent estimates putting the amount of new spending at $206 million annually. The same studies estimate that the new park will create thousands of construction jobs and hundreds of permanent jobs.

Dear Red Sox Fans:

- A Message From Dan Duquette -

Welcome to Red Sox Spring Training 2000. With baseball under way here in sunny Fort Myers, I hope that your spirits are nearly as sky-high as they were in the stands at Fenway Park in October. Last season was a truly remarkable one for Red Sox fans and baseball in Boston. It encompassed the incredible emotion and excitement of the All-Star Game and the team's tremendous regular season and post-season performances. Fans enjoyed not only a superb team performance, but also the outstanding baseball performances of individual players, from Pedro Martinez and Nomar Garciaparra, to the outstanding sophomore seasons of Derek Lowe and Jason Varitek. Many fans have told me that the 1999 season, overall, was one of the most satisfying sustained fan experiences they have had. Last year will be tough to top. However, because all the key components of the 1999 ballclub are back, our expectations remain high as we look ahead to the quickly approaching 2000 regular season. The club remains dedicated to our goal of bringing a World Series Championship to Boston.

Success in 1999

The 1999 Red Sox earned a playoff berth, winning the AL Wild Card with a 94-68 (.580) record. It was the first time since 1915-16 that the Red Sox have appeared in post-season play in consecutive years, and it was the third time in the past five seasons that we earned a playoff spot. A.L. Manager of the Year Jimmy Williams utilized the entire roster and successfully guided this hard-working ballclub through a long schedule and the adversity of injury, which included 13 different players on the disabled list on 18 different occasions. To achieve this success, both our pitching staff and offense performed exceptionally well, led by All-Stars Pedro Martinez and Nomar Garciaparra. How about the memorable and historic season the '99 Cy Young Award winner turned in! Pedro became the first Red Sox pitcher since Cy Young himself in 1901 to lead the league in wins (23), ERA (2.07), and strikeouts (313). Pedro also set an all-time record with 13.2 strikeouts per nine innings. He was the first pitcher to earn Pitcher of the Month honors four times. What a treat it was to watch Pedro pitch game after game with the kind of style and flair that is rarely seen in the Major Leagues. Pedro also earned AP Player of the Year honors and finished second in the A.L. MVP voting. His awards speak volumes about what a unique player he really is.

Fans also enjoyed another outstanding season by Nomar, as he won the 1999 A.L. batting title with a .357 average. He became only the fourth Red Sox right-handed batter in history to win the title. He also earned many MVP votes for his excellent year. Nomar's hard work and consistent quality of play provides great leadership for our entire ballclub. Joining Nomar and Pedro on the 1999 A.L. All-Star team was Jose Offerman, who also became an instant fan favorite with his consistent and professional performance at the plate. All three AL All-Stars complemented the contribution put forth by the entire ballclub.

Looking Ahead to 2000

The Red Sox organization has been successful in our efforts to sign our key major league players to multi-year contracts so that our fans will be able to enjoy their consistent top caliber performances well into the future. Almost the entire ballclub will be returning this season. After winning the Wild Card and defeating Cleveland in the Division Series, we had a good chance to beat the World Series Champion Yankees in the big games during the ALCS. Without a doubt, this 2000 Red Sox team will be in a position to challenge them again and I'm sure that you'll join us in looking forward to renewing that challenge.

Fans particularly enjoy the hard-working nature of this returning Red Sox team. Our outfield combination of Darren Lewis, Troy O'Leary, and Trot Nixon are set to return. Trot should be commended for his determination all season, as he steadily improved to become a fan favorite. Fans will also enjoy watching newly acquired outfielder Carl Everett, who was one of the best clutch-hitters in the National League last season. He's the type of player that can help us beat the Yankees, and others, in close games. Brian Daubach received Rookie of the Year consideration with his dramatic clutch hitting; he will also return. Experienced veterans Mike Stanley and John Valentin, as well as the young and talented Donnie Sadler and Wilton Veras, are all set to return. Veras certainly opened eyes around baseball this year as the young Dominican stepped right in from double-A to contribute as a starter on the Major League level when Valentin was injured. We've also added veteran Major Leaguer Manny Alexander to our club. He has excellent ability as a pinch-hitter and is an extremely versatile infielder with notable talent to play the left side of the infield.

Our versatile bullpen and starting rotation were key ingredients to our success in 1999. Once again, the combination of Lowe, Rheal Cormier, Rich Garces, Rod Beck, Bryce Florie, and John Wasdin will be together again in the bullpen, with the addition of Sang-Hoon Lee, Korea's top pitcher. Last season, for the first time in team history, the Red Sox had three pitchers earn 10 or more saves: Lowe with 15, Gordon with 15, and Tim Wakefield with 11. In addition to contributing as a reliever, Wakefield also bolstered the starting rotation during the season. We expect that our young pitchers, including Juan Pena, Brian Rose, and Tomo Ohka will again contribute during the 162-game season. The Red Sox also added veteran lefty Jeff Fassero to bolster our staff. Following in the tradition of Red Sox players who have successfully battled back after injury, Ramon Martinez came on strong down the stretch to become one of the most important arms on the staff, and a very positive presence in the clubhouse. As Ramon builds on his progress from last year, fans are looking forward to the potentially awesome combination of the Martinez brothers in our rotation. We also hope to have Bret Saberhagen back from his surgery to help us again this year. If there's any pitcher in baseball that can battle back quickly and successfully, it's Bret. We are fortunate also to have two solid catchers complementing our pitching staff in Varitek and Scott Hatteberg. Jason, who was named one of the two most improved catchers in baseball by Baseball America, is well on his way to becoming one of the best in the league with the intense work ethic and competitive drive that is indicative of all the players on our club.

Minor League and Player Development Overview

Overall, the Red Sox minor league system finished the 1999 season with a 368-331 (.526) record and became the only organization in baseball to have increased its winning percentage every year since 1993. We were also just one of four organizations to have a combined winning percentage above .500 for each of the last four seasons. Our double-A ballclub, Trenton, was named Minor League Team of the Year by Baseball America and led all minor league baseball with a 92-50 record. Catcher Steve Lomasney, a Peabody, MA native, heads up a list of young, up-and-coming major leaguers that are products of our scouting and player development system. We are pleased that our emphasis and efforts in scouting and developing top young talent from the United States and all over the world has continued to payoff for us with the intended goal of supporting our major league team by providing a feeder system and crucial flexibility for trades. Because of the depth of our minor league talent, we were able to acquire Carl Everett, as well as slugger Butch Huskey and pitchers Kent Mercker and Beck to help us during the stretch run last season. In addition to Lomasney, who was a September call-up from Trenton in '99, fans have already enjoyed watching young pitchers like Rose, Pena, and Japanese native Ohka contribute on the big league level. This past season, Ohka was named to the Baseball Weekly's Minor League All-Star team, selected from among all players throughout the minors. Fans can also watch for Korean righty Sunny Kim in the future, as he continues to develop through our system. Kim recently led Mesa to the Arizona Fall League Championship with a 5-1, 2.27 record in 32 innings, while striking out 31 batters and walking only seven.

Veras, Nixon, and Sadler are all successful graduates of our system and fans will enjoy watching prospects Dernell Stenson, and David Eckstein as they progress through our system towards the majors. Stenson, a first baseman, was rated Best Batting Prospect in Baseball

America's Best Tools in triple-A rankings this year, as well as being named to their Minor League Top Prospect List and All-Prospect Team. Eckstein was rated Best Defensive Second Baseman in double-A by Baseball America and he was also among the five Red Sox minor leaguers named to their Mid-Season All-Star Team, which was the most named from any organization. As we watch these young prospects compete here in Spring Training, we look forward to seeing many of them playing for the Red Sox at Fenway Park.

Thanks To You

All of us in the Red Sox management group will always remember how much fun Red Sox fans were having during last year's Division Series and ALCS. There is no doubt in any of our minds that you, and all our fans, were a key component to the Red Sox success in defeating Cleveland to go on to the ALCS. From the chants to the cheers, you deserved the 1999 Tenth Player Award for the tremendous support you showed for our club and organization. On behalf of John Harrington and the entire Red Sox organization, I want to thank you for your valuable loyalty and support. We have worked hard to provide you with a meaningful September and October in 2000.

Thanks for joining us here in Spring Training and we look forward to seeing you in April at Fenway Park.

Sincerely,

Dan Duquette

Newly Acquired Clutch-Hitting Outfielder Carl Everett Set To Make Impact On Red Sox

On December 12, 1999, at the 1999 MLB Winter Meetings, the Boston Red Sox acquired one of the National League's best clutch hitters, switch-hitting outfielder Carl Everett. Boston acquired Everett from the Houston Astros in exchange for infielder Adam Everett and LHP Greg Miller.

Everett liked the idea of coming to Boston. "I think it's a good fit," he said. "The teammates I have — they want to win. So I think I fit in that way already. I roomed with Troy O'Leary in Puerto Rico, and I know pretty much the entire pitching staff. Just watching the team, I feel like I know them. They're straightforward and leave it on the field, do what it takes to win, no matter who they're playing."

Immediately after finalizing the trade, Executive Vice President and General Manager Dan Duquette began working on signing Everett to a multi-year deal.

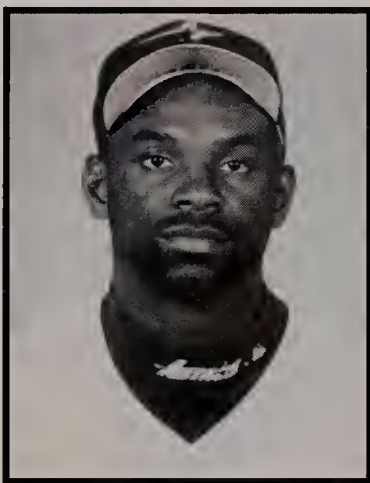

Signing their key players to multi-year deals has been an important part of the Red Sox success in building a perennial championship-caliber ballclub. On February 15, the Red Sox and Everett reached an agreement on a three-year deal with a club option for a fourth.

"Carl was one of the top clutch hitters in the National League last year," said Duquette after completing the multi-year deal with Everett. "And with his signing with the club for a number of years, we look forward to having him join our key core players like Nomar Garciaparra, Jose Offerman, and Pedro Martinez. Carl's biggest asset, of which he has several — he is really a five-tool player — but his biggest asset is his ability to hit with men on base in clutch situations, which he acquired last year in the second half of the season. He also has excellent speed and a very good throwing arm, so he should be a real strong player to help the Red Sox in the coming season. We are happy to have him on a multi-year deal."

The acquisition and signing of Everett was reminiscent of another very significant player move that Duquette made not too long ago. "We traded two premium pitchers for Pedro, and we traded a premium shortstop prospect in Adam Everett to Houston for Carl," explained Duquette. "In both cases, we had an idea that we had a reasonable chance to sign the player to a multi-year deal and we were willing to take that reasonable chance to make the trade. It's a tribute to our scouting and development programs. We had the players in place in Carl Pavano and Tony Armas, Jr. to trade to Montreal. And we also had Adam Everett and Greg Miller available to trade to Houston. If we did not have available the players those other teams liked, those other teams would have traded these good Major League players to another market. We were fortunate to be able to build up the good players in the minors and have them available to make this deal."

Carl was pleased with his decision to sign a long-term deal and the prospect of playing in Boston into the future. "It was the atmosphere that I observed when watching the team play," said Everett.

"The team has a concept with a mutual goal of winning. I watched Jimmy Williams' personality. Up there in Boston during the Red Sox Caravan, the warmth that I felt at that time made me feel like I fit in with the ballclub. The team is young and has the same goals that I do — that is to win and it doesn't matter how."

Carl Everett.

Many in baseball felt it was one of the best off-season acquisitions in baseball, for Everett is a 28-year old, five-tool player coming off an amazing offensive season with the Astros. "I haven't put any lineup cards together, but I like the new option a lot," remarked Red Sox manager Jimmy Williams. "He likes to hit with runners on base. He's a real two-way player — he can hit and run, and he knows how to knock catchers down trying to score. That all tells you he's trying to win. He knows what it means to win."

With men in scoring position in 1999, Everett hit .348 (48-138) with 10 doubles, six homers, 82 RBI, a .430 on base percentage, and a .580 slugging percentage. Overall in '99, he set career-highs in almost every offensive category, including a .325 average (151-464), 151 hits, 86 runs, 25 HR, 108 RBI, 265 total bases, 50 walks, and 27 stolen bases in 34 attempts. He also had an impressive .398 on-base percentage and a .571 slugging percentage. In 398 at-bats in the 4th and 5th slots in the order, Everett batted .316 with 23 doubles, three triples, 25 HR, and 96 RBI. He played in 123 games, which included 118 games in center field, 16 in right, and two in left.

In the second half of the 1999 season, Everett had a .348 average (54-155) with 14 HR, 43 RBI, a .444 on base percentage and a .703 slugging percentage. During interleague play last season, he had a .357 average against American League pitching with a .607 slugging percentage. He also had a .359 average (65-181) on grass with 12 HR and 48 RBI.

"The addition of Carl gives us a much stronger outfield than we had a year ago," said Duquette. "That was one of the areas of the team that we wanted to improve going into the season. We were looking for more offensive production, and with the addition of Carl not only did we get a good offensive player, but also a good defensive player, and probably our best throwing outfielder."

In the last five seasons, Everett has hit .280 (520-1855) with 293 runs, 116 doubles, 67 HR, 311 RBI, 66 stolen bases, a .352 on-base percentage, and a .293 average with men in scoring position.

"With Everett, a switch hitter in the middle of the lineup with power, Jimmy Williams has more options," said Duquette. "It gives the opposing pitchers more problems in terms of the speed that Carl adds to the lineup as well as his power and ability to hit in the clutch. It adds another dynamic — adding a middle of the lineup hitter that can play in the center of the diamond. I think the signing of Everett will be a really good addition to the ballclub over time."

Ramon Martinez Returns To Form

In June, he took the mound in a rehab appearance with the Red Sox single-A entry in the NY Penn League, the Lowell Spinners. In September, almost three months later, he was starting for the Red Sox and playing a key role, on and off the field, in Boston's 1999 playoff run.

It was, without a doubt, one of the best stories in a storybook year for Boston baseball. After more than a year of inspirational dedication and hard work on the road back from rotator cuff surgery in June 1998, Ramon had not only returned to pitch in the majors, he had become a key component of the Red Sox stretch run drive and postseason effort.

Red Sox manager Jimmy Williams gave Ramon the ball late in the season after watching him work his way back. "I watched him down there in the pen in Oakland, throwing on the side," remarked Jimmy. "The effort this man put in...and then he came to me and said 'I want to help this club, I'm ready to help this club.' He certainly deserves a lot of credit."

Ramon's hard work paid off. In his three final regular-season starts, Martinez was 2-0 with just nine hits and four runs allowed over 17.2 innings. He pitched so well that he earned a spot on the Red Sox playoff roster and made quality starts in both the American League Division Series against Cleveland and the AL Championship Series against New York.

It has been a remarkable comeback for Martinez, who even as late as May had to curtail a side session after five minutes because of discomfort in his shoulder.

"When you think of where he's come from and where he is now," Boston pitching coach Joe Kerrigan said, "it's quite a tribute to the man."

Signed by Red Sox Executive Vice President and General Manager Dan Duquette as a free agent during spring training last year, Martinez had compiled a won-loss record of 123-77 with a 3.45 ERA in 11 years with the Los Angeles Dodgers. He recorded winning percentages of .600 or better in seven of his 11 seasons with Los Angeles and has 20 major league shutouts to his credit. Ramon began the 1998 season as the Dodgers ace. He made 15 starts and was on a torrid pace for the season with a 7-3 record and a 2.83 ERA in 101.2 innings pitched with 91 strikeouts and only 41 walks before his season was cut short by his shoulder injury. At that time, he was among the leaders in several National League pitching categories including 9th place with seven wins, 6th with 91 strikeouts, and 2nd with opponents batting at a mere .206 clip.

"Ramon brings us great leadership ability," said Duquette after signing Ramon. "It's hard to win a game in the big leagues, but Ramon's .615 winning percentage speaks for itself. We are glad to have his presence on our ballclub, both on and off the field."

Pedro Martinez echoed Duquette's enthusiasm to have Ramon, whom Pedro affectionately and respectfully calls "Papa," join the Red Sox. "I feel much better this year having my best friend and my brother at the same time on my team. He is a veteran who is also my mentor. I think he is going to be a big help with this team," predicted younger brother Pedro.

"We have pretty much the same repertoire... fastball, changeup... but he throws a slider and I throw a curveball. That's the only difference," Pedro analyzed. "We throw about the same velocity. He's taller, but our mechanics are the same."

At the press conference announcing his signing, Ramon predicted,

"There's no question in my mind I'll be back 100 percent. I'm glad to be here. I hope to stay here the rest of my career. I'm glad to be with my brother again. We'll help the team as much as we can."

But Martinez's journey back to the majors took hard work, perseverance, and even inspiration from his younger brother. "There have been a lot of moments where I feel, 'Man, I can't make it,'" said Ramon. "But the next day, I would feel fine again and I would get all confused. There were times I asked Pedro, 'Should I shut it down this year?' That would only last a moment. Then I would see him pitch and I would say 'C'mon man.'"

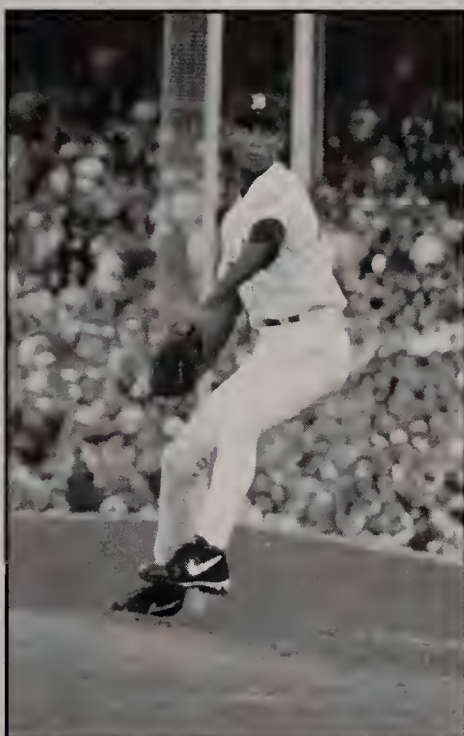

After ten rehabilitation starts overall at Lowell, Sarasota, Trenton, and Pawtucket, Martinez made his debut for Boston on September 2 against Kansas City. Despite taking the loss, there were clear and impressive signs that Ramon was returning to form.

"When I was out there on the mound, I was thinking 'I'm back.' I said it to myself, I was just so happy to be back in the big leagues," the 31-year-old Dominican right-hander told reporters after the game. "I got a chance and I was getting better and better. I got this chance to prove I can pitch, and here I am. Once there is a chance, you take advantage of it."

In his third appearance back in the majors on September 25 against Baltimore, Ramon's determination led to his first victory as a Red Sox — a sparkling seven-inning, four-hit effort that halted a surging Orioles club. It was his first victory since June 3 in 1998, almost a month before he had surgery on his shoulder. At the end of the seventh inning, Martinez left the mound and was greeted by his teammates, led by Pedro, in the dugout.

"I'm not surprised," said Kerrigan after Ramon's win. "I've seen the guy pitch for too many years, and he is one of the most dedicated pitchers I've ever seen as far as conditioning goes. He still understands the art of pitching," Kerrigan added. "He understands that every time you throw the ball, you're making a pitch, not just throwing it. You're making a pitch to produce positive results, to produce an out."

Manager Jimmy Williams agreed. "All the work he's done all year, to get back here, with all the stops he made — Lowell, Sarasota, Fort Myers, Pawtucket — he kept trying. He believes in himself, and he was able to come back and help this team."

Ramon unloads a pitch in front of the Fenway faithful

"I didn't know if there was another chance," admitted Ramon. "But they gave me the opportunity to pitch and I took advantage of that, and I became better and better and feel better every time."

Ramon saved his best for the postseason, as Boston was facing Division Series elimination at the hands of the Cleveland Indians. In Game 3 of the Division Series at Fenway Park, Martinez allowed two runs on five hits and three walks, striking out six. Leaving with two out in the sixth inning and the game tied at two, he tipped his cap in response to the enthusiastic cheers of the Fenway faithful. Fans appreciated his effort and performance. Ramon's hard work and leadership again paid off and the Red Sox dramatically came back from the two-game deficit and defeated the Indians in five games.

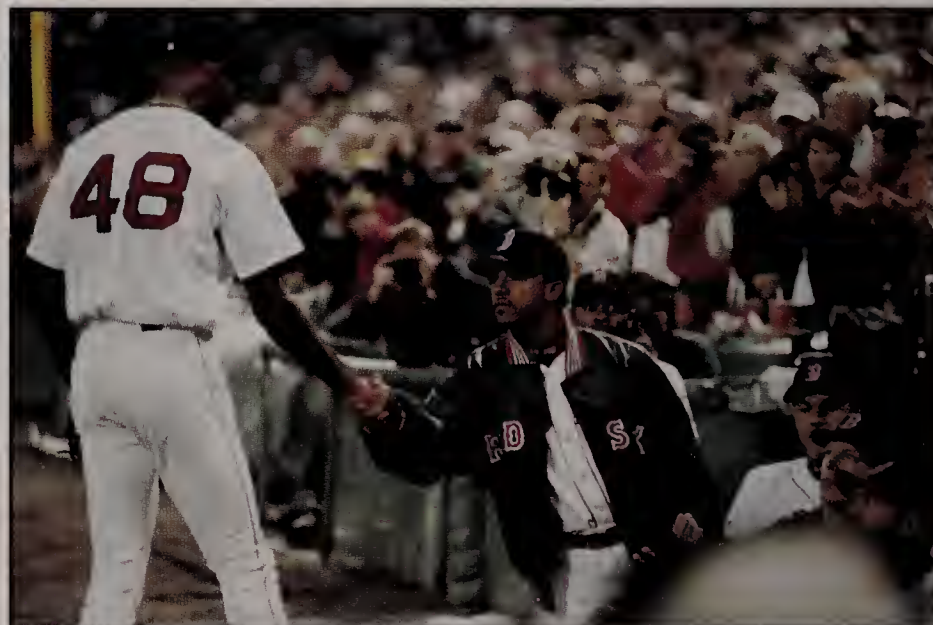

His teammates appreciated the effort as well. "It was a pretty big lift," said shortstop John Valentin, who had a homer and two-run double in the 9-3 victory. "He hasn't pitched a whole lot this year. He's been hurt, coming off surgery. They decided to use him in the playoffs and he pitched very big. I mean, he gave us a chance to win."

Boston earned the right to go on to the ALCS to face the Yankees, and it was Ramon who was again on the mound in a crucial spot for the Red Sox. Ramon took the ball to start Game 2 of the ALCS in New York. In 6.2 innings, he allowed three runs, six hits and three walks, and struck out five. Amazingly, he threw 120 pitches, 22 more than he had in any of his previous stints, and still felt healthy and strong.

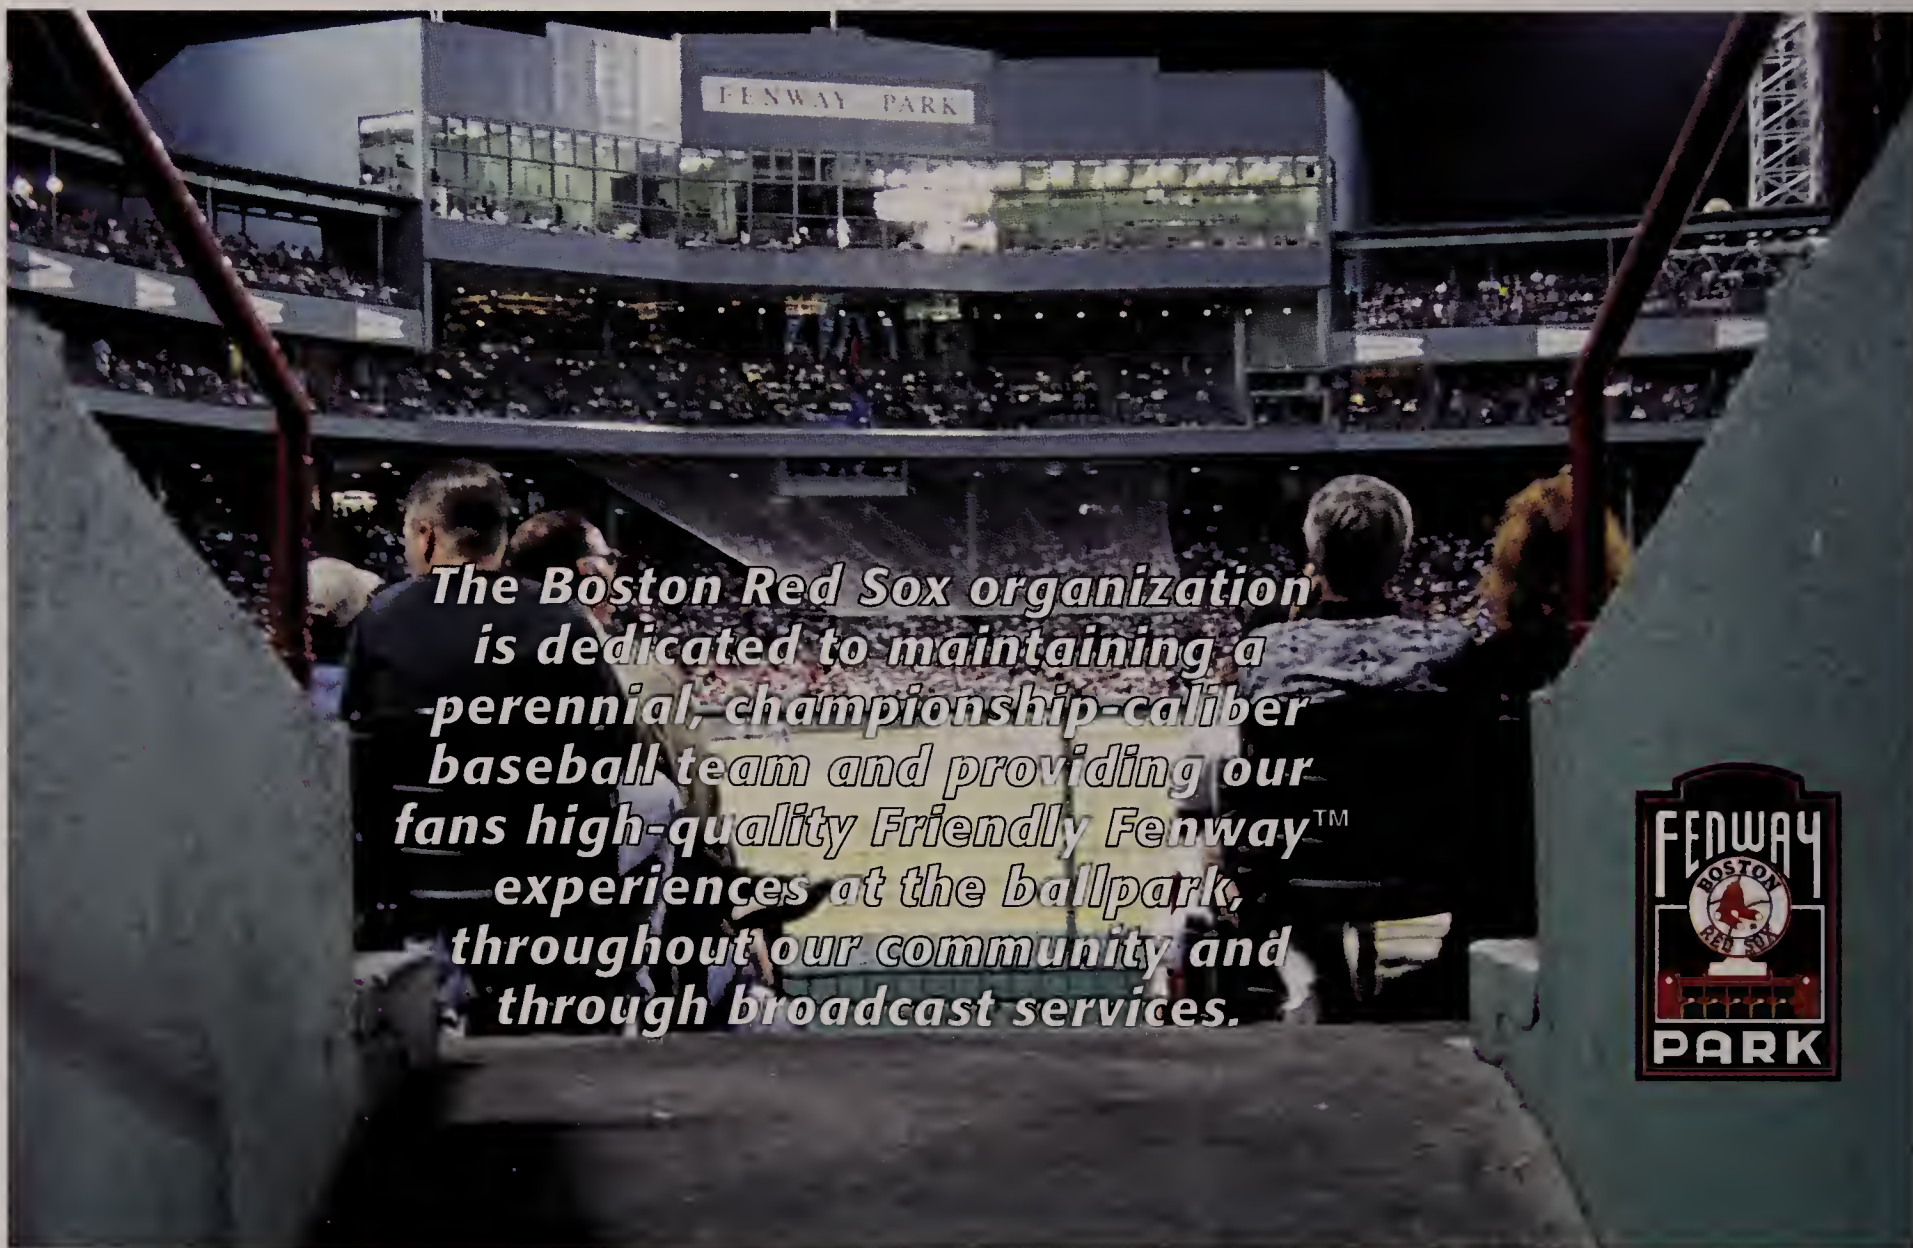

"I can go farther than that," Martinez said after the game. "I felt fine when I come out of the game. I was just normal. I don't feel any kind of pain, tired or anything."

Unfortunately the start in New York was his last of 1999, but only because the Red Sox season ended in the ALCS — not because of Ramon's health or performance. In a season filled with excitement and drama, the story of Ramon Martinez and his comeback is still fresh in the minds of fans as the Red Sox prepare for the 2000 campaign...and still in the mind of Ramon as he looks forward to taking the ball at Fenway Park in April.

Meet the Manager & Coaches

The Manager

Jimmy Williams

Number: 22

Age: 56

Born: October 4, 1943,

Arroyo Grande, CA

Ht.: 5-11; Wt.: 170

Bats and Throws: Right

Home: Dunedin, FL

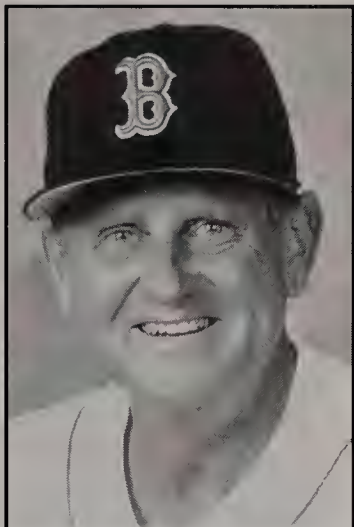

Married: Peggy Sallee

Children: Monica Jean 4/26/78,

Brady Charles 10/18/79,

Shawn Thomas 9/18/83,

Jenna Marie 2/15/85

In 1999, for the second straight season, Jimmy Williams guided the Red Sox to post-season play and the A.L. Wild Card title. It was the first time the Red Sox did so since the 1915-16 seasons. Williams' Red Sox finished the '99 season with a 94-68 record. The 94 wins were the most by the Sox since the 1986 A.L. Champions (95-66). The club had consecutive 90-win seasons for the first time since the 1977-78-79 Red Sox. For his efforts, Williams earned A.L. Manager of the Year honors, voted by the Baseball Writers Association. He finished first in the voting with 115 points, including 20 first-place votes and five second-place votes. Williams became the second Red Sox Manager to win the AL Manager of the Year since the award's inception in 1983, joining John McNamara (1986).

Williams' 1998 team also finished in second place in the AL East with a 92-70 record (.568 — second best in AL). In '98, Boston had the second-best record in the American League (92-70), moved up to second place in the Eastern Division and won the league's Wild Card Playoff berth. Williams manipulated 24 position players, including four second basemen, and 23 pitchers effectively as the Red Sox remained in playoff contention the entire season. The Baseball Writers Association ranked Jimmy second in the official A.L. Manager-of-the-Year ratings with 59 points including three first-place votes. The Red Sox were an explosive offensive team in 1997, but a rash of early-season injuries contributed to the club's final 78-84 fourth-place finish.

Jimmy became the 41st Red Sox manager when he signed a two-year contract Nov. 19, 1996. He was the third base coach for the Atlanta Braves from June 25, 1990 through their N. L. pennant-winning 1996 season. He began 1990 as a Braves minor league instructor.

Williams has 32 years of professional baseball experience with the last 23 as a coach or manager. Before joining Atlanta he was the Toronto Blue Jays manager from 1986 through May 14, 1989, where he compiled a 281-241 .538 record. That included finishing just two games behind the East Division leader in both 1987 and 1988. In 1980 Williams started his Toronto career as the third base and outfield coach. He remained third base coach but in 1982 switched from the outfield to infield defensive coach, and held those roles until he was named manager for the 1986 season after Bobby Cox left the Blue Jays for Atlanta. During the 1981 and 1982 off-seasons, Jimmy managed Obregon in the Mexican Winter L. After the 1984 season he was runner-up to Chuck Cottier for the Seattle manager's job.

Jimmy retired as an active player in 1971, and obtained his first managing job at the Angels Quad Cities club in the Midwest L. in 1974, leading the team to first place in the Southern Division's first half. In six years of minor league managing, Williams' teams had five winning seasons including a 90-54 .625 first-place finish in 1976 at Salt Lake City of the AAA Pacific Coast L. In 1979, his second time at Salt Lake, he was 80-68 .541, second place, before winning the PCL playoff championship by sweeping Albuquerque (2 straight) and Hawaii (3 straight).

Williams was a shortstop throughout his playing days. He was signed as a free agent by Red Sox scouts Glenn Wright and Bobby Doerr to play at Waterloo of the Midwest L. in 1965 where he led the league's shortstops in fielding pct. and was named to the All-Star team. That began a seven-year pro playing career that was shortened by a shoulder injury during the winter of 1969. In December 1965 he was drafted by St. Louis from the Sox AAA roster and spent 1966 with the Cardinals despite being in the army reserves the last two months. He struck out in his first major league at bat vs. Sandy Koufax but got his first hit off another Hall of Fame pitcher, Juan Marichal.

He played 14 major league games with St. Louis in 1966-67 and was with the Cardinals during their 1967 September drive to the N.L. pennant. In 1968 Williams was traded to Cincinnati with catcher Pat Corrales for catcher Johnny Edwards, and in 1969 he was selected by the Montreal Expos in the N.L. expansion draft.

Jimmy graduated from Arroyo Grande (CA) H.S. and Fresno State U. with a B.S. degree in Agribusiness (animal science). His last two years at Fresno State he was an All-California Collegiate All-Star. In 1963-64 he played at Sturgis (SD) in the semi-pro Basin L. where he was scouted by the Red Sox. In 1964 he also played for the Alaska Goldpanners who placed second in the National Baseball Congress tournament.

Pitching Coach

Joe Kerrigan

Number: 16

Age: 46

Born: January 30, 1954,

Philadelphia, PA

Ht.: 6-5; Wt.: 210

Bats and Throws: Right

Home: North Wales, PA

Married: Abigail McKean

Children: Joseph (Joey) Jr. 11/1/76,

Kelly 3/21/78.

In 1999, Kerrigan's pitching staff led the A.L. in ERA for the first time since 1914 (2.35) with a 4.00 mark and the sixth time overall. Red Sox pitchers also led the M.L. with 12 shutouts and the A.L. with a 4.00 ERA, 1131 strikeouts and a .253 batting average allowed. Sox hurlers also allowed the least runs (718), hits (1396) and walks (469) in the league. The staff tied for the league lead in saves with 50 (with NYY) and had three pitchers with 10 or more saves for the first time in team history (Lowe & Wakefield - 15, Gordon - 11). The 12-5 (.706) record in shutouts was the best pct. in the A.L., second in the M.L. only to Cin. (11-3 .786). In 1998 a much-improved pitching staff from '97 was a major reason for the Red Sox climb to 92 wins and a Wild-Card berth in the A.L. playoffs. Under Kerrigan's direction, the development of closer Tom Gordon helped the bullpen lead the A.L. with 53 saves. The staff was second with a 4.18 ERA and a .255 batting avg. allowed and issued the third fewest walks, 504.

Joe signed a two-year contract to become pitching coach in Oct. 1996, after five years in that role for the Montreal Expos. In 1997 he had to manipulate 24 pitchers, including 13 different starters, as injuries hampered the staff all season. Sox pitchers allowed 149 HR, 2nd least in the A.L. (NYY, 144). His 1996 Expos staff allowed the least hits in the M.L., 1353, and tied with Atlanta for the lowest batt. avg. allowed, .247. They also had the third most strikeouts in the M.L., 1206, the fourth fewest walks (3rd in the N.L.), 482, and the fourth best ERA, 3.78. In 1994 the staff led the N.L. with a 3.56 ERA, the bullpen led the M.L. in saves (46) for the second straight year (a club record 61 saves in 1993) and was first in Rolands Relief standings with 119 points. The 1992 staff was second in the N.L. with a 3.25 ERA and allowed 1296 hits, fewest in the M.L. They held the opposition to a .238 batting avg., lowest in the N.L. In 1992 Kerrigan returned to the Expos M.L. coaching staff after a five-year absence as Montreal's fifth pitching coach in 26 years. From 1983 through 1986 he was the Expos bullpen coach, then was a minor league pitching coach for Montreal at AA Jacksonville (1987), AAA Indianapolis (1988-90) and AA Harrisburg (1991). In those five years his pitching staffs ranked first in their league three times, second once and third once.

Joe was Montreal's first-round selection in the January 1974 draft (10th overall) after pitching for Temple U. He made his M.L. debut July 9, 1976 vs. the Astros, and his first two wins came on the same day in a double-header at St. Louis, Sept. 8, 1976. He was traded to Baltimore in December 1977. In 1979 he led the International L. with 64 appearances for Rochester and was third with 12 saves. He pitched at Indianapolis (Cin.) in 1981 and ended his pro career with Oklahoma City (Phil.) in 1982.

Third Base Coach

Wendell Kim

Number: 12

Age: 49; Turns 50 on March 9

Born: March 9, 1950

Honolulu, HI

Ht.: 5-5; Wt.: 160

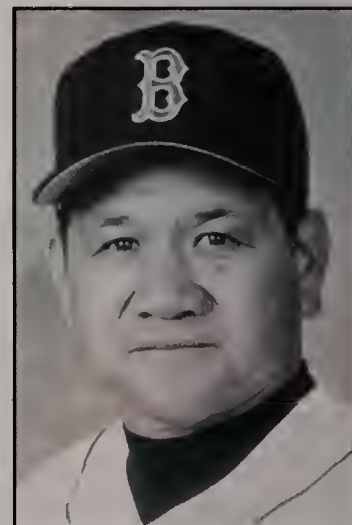

Bats and Throws: Right

Home: Mesa, AZ

Married: Natasha Pearse

Children: Shannon 10/2 /69,

Donald 12/30/83.

The energetic Kim is the Red Sox third base coach and infield instructor. He came to the Red Sox in 1997 after five years in a similar capacity with the San Francisco Giants and three years (1989-91) as the Giants' first base coach.

Wendell, the first Korean-American to wear a major league uniform, is one of the most aggressive third base coaches in the major leagues. Prior to joining the Giants major league staff, Kim managed in the San Francisco organization for eight years including 1987-88 at their Triple-A Phoenix team in the Pacific Coast L. He also managed in 1986 at Shreveport, 1983-85 at Fresno and 1981-82 at Clinton. He had five straight winning seasons, 1983-87, and was named Texas L. Manager of the Year when Shreveport was 80-56 in 1986, and California L. Manager of the Year in 1985 after leading Fresno to an 84-62 first-place finish. Overall he compiled a 583-536 .521 record. Wendell spent seven seasons as an infielder in the Giants minor league system before becoming a coach in 1980 at Shreveport. He began playing at Decatur (A) in 1973 and moved to Fresno in 1974 where he hit .306 and was an honorable mention CL All-Star. Kim played two years with Lafayette (AA Texas L.) and in 1976 led the TL with 164 hits and all TL second basemen in fielding (.983) and total chances (654). He moved up to AAA Phoenix in 1977, and in 1978 hit a career-high .313 in 76 games. He hit .272 in 45 games with the Miami Amigos of the short-lived Inter-American L. in 1979 and played in two games while coaching at Shreveport in 1980.

Kim graduated from Banning H.S. (Wilmington, CA). He played three years of varsity baseball at Cal Poly Pomona and set Bronco career records for runs (93), walks (91) and games (124). He was selected twice for the All-California Collegiate Athletic Association team, and signed as a free agent with the Giants in 1973 after attending an open tryout camp. Wendell has been an important part of the Red Sox community relations programs. He was honored by the team's booster organization, The BoSox Club, as their 1997 Man of the Year, only the second non-player to receive the award in 31 years. His motivational messages and sleight-of-hand card tricks have made Wendell a fan favorite at baseball functions.

In 1974 he won the International L. Triple Crown (.337, 25, 93) at Pawtucket and joined the Sox to stay that mid-August. He was also named Minor L. Player of the Year and Int. L. MVP and Rookie of the Year. Rice helped Boston win the 1975 A.L. pennant with a .309, 22-HR, 102-RBI rookie season. In 1978 he was the A.L. MVP as he led the majors with 46 HR, 139 RBI, 15 triples, 406 TB, 213 H and a .600 slugg. pct. He is the only A.L. player to attain 400 TB since 1937 and the only player to lead either league outright in HR, triples and RBI the same season. Rice led the A.L. in TB three straight years (1977-79) to tie Ted Williams and Ty Cobb for the league record. He had four 200-hit seasons, and in 1986 was 3rd in the MVP voting after an excellent .324 avg., with 200 H, 20 HR and 110 RBI in 157 games as the Red Sox again won the A.L. pennant. In example to left, batter reached first on an error by the second baseman, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball. It is convenient to encircle all runs as shown so that scoring plays may be seen at a glance.

LHP Jeff Fassero

The Red Sox signed pitcher Jeff Fassero as a free agent on December 22, 1999. Fassero, 37, has a 92-83 career record with a 3.81 ERA. Last season he pitched a season-high eight innings three times and he pitched at least six innings in 12 of his 27 starts with Seattle and Texas. Prior to last season, Fassero recorded 12 or more wins five of the last six seasons. "We are pleased to have Jeff Fassero join the Red Sox," said Red Sox Executive Vice President and General Manager Dan Duquette. "Jeff is one of baseball's top left-handed pitchers in the 90's and we expect that reuniting him with pitching coach Joe Kerrigan will serve to make him even more valuable to our ballclub, especially playing against the left-handed hitting teams in the American League."

Over the last five seasons, Fassero has a 62-60 record with a 4.29 ERA. Left-handed batters have only batted .253 against him during that stretch. In 1998, Fassero was 13-12 with Seattle and pitched 224.2 innings. Fassero pitched a career-high seven complete games and finished 7th in the A.L. strikeouts (176) and 9th in strikeouts per 9 innings (7.1). Right-handers only batted .251 against him and the Mariners only scored 32 total runs in his 12 losses. Fassero has been his team's opening day starter in five of the last six seasons. He averaged 207.2 innings per season over the course of the last five years. As a starter from 1995-1999, Fassero had a 62-59, 4.20 record with 15 complete games in 158 starts. Taking his turn in a five-man rotation during that time, he was 22-19 with a 3.77 ERA. In Montreal during the 1992-1996 seasons working with pitching coach Joe Kerrigan, Fassero had a 56-43, 3.25 record in 211 appearances, including 100 starts.

OF Marty Cordova

The Red Sox signed free agent outfielder Marty Cordova on January 19. The 30-year old Cordova averaged 98 RBI and 20 HR in his first two seasons in the majors. He earned American League Rookie of the Year honors in 1995.

"The acquisition of Marty Cordova gives our ballclub additional offensive power and depth in our outfield," said Duquette. "Marty is a former Rookie of the Year and has matured into a solid major leaguer as he was a top offensive leader on the Twins last season. He will also be a dependable defensive asset for our club."

Cordova led the Minnesota Twins last year with 70 RBI and finished the 1999 season with a .285 average (121-425) with 62 runs, 28 doubles, 14 home runs, 197 total bases, and 13 stolen bases. With runners in scoring position and two outs, he hit .321. Cordova ranked second on the club with homers and doubles and he ranked third in batting, total bases and walks. The 6-0, 206 pounder also finished with a .365 on-base percentage and a .464 slugging percentage, which were both the second-best marks on the Twins. Cordova hit .310 with 12 homers against right-handers in '99 and .357 (5-14) as a pinch-hitter. Overall last season he played in 124 games and defensively he finished with a .927 fielding percentage. In 1995 the right-handed hitting outfielder batted .277 with 24 HR, and 20 steals. The following season, Cordova batted .309 with 46 doubles, 16 HR and 111 RBI. In five seasons in the majors, Cordova has a .277 average with 139 doubles, 79 HR and 385 RBI.

INF Manny Alexander

The Red Sox acquired infielder Manny Alexander from the Chicago Cubs in exchange for OF Damon Buford on December 11, 1999. "Manny Alexander is an experienced veteran major leaguer," said Duquette. "He has excellent ability as a pinch-hitter and is an extremely versatile infielder, with notable talent playing the left side of the infield."

Alexander, 28, played in 90 games overall last season with the Cubs and finished with a .271 average (48-177) with 11 doubles, 15 RBI, a .309 on-base percentage, and a .303 average at home. He has an impressive .318 average (21-66) as a pinch-hitter during the last two seasons, with a .293 mark last year. He ranked second among all pinch-hitters in the National League in 1998 with a .360 average (9-25). Overall, he has a .291 career-average as a pinch-hitter. The right-handed hitting infielder made 71 appearances in the field last season, displaying his versatility by playing 30 games at shortstop (16 starts), 22 at third base (seven starts), 17 at second base (seven starts), and two games in right field. In 1998 Alexander saw action in 97 games in the field, with 50 games at shortstop (26 starts), 27 at second base (16 starts), 19 games at third base (13 starts), and one game in left field. Alexander joined the Cubs in 1997 as a player to be named in a six-player trade with the New York Mets. He has also played for Baltimore during his seven-year career in the majors.

OF Jermaine Allensworth

The Boston Red Sox acquired outfielder Jermaine Allensworth from the New York Mets in exchange for OF Jon Nunnally on November 12, 1999. Allensworth, 27, has a .260 (268-1031) batting average over four major league seasons with 49 doubles, eight triples, 15 home runs and 114 RBI. He has also stole 42 bases in 62 attempts, for a 68% success rate. In 342 career games, the right-handed hitting outfielder has a .275 batting average vs. left-handers and a .253 batting average vs. right-handers. At Norfolk (AAA) in 1999 he appeared in 81 games, batting .264 (72-273) with 20 doubles, five triples five home runs, 20 RBI and 10 stolen bases. Last season with the Mets, Allensworth displayed his versatility by appearing in 10 games in left field, 14 in center field and 15 in right field. He recorded two doubles, three home runs and 9 RBI in 40 games last season. The 6-0, 190 pounder played in 133 games in 1998, batting a combined .272 between Pittsburgh, Kansas City and New York (NL). Allensworth began the 1998 season with Pittsburgh where he hit .309 (72-233) in 69 games with 13 doubles, three triples, three home runs, 24 RBI, 8 stolen bases in 12 attempts, and a .429 slugging percentage. Allensworth's first full season in the major leagues was in 1997 with Pittsburgh. He played in 108 games and made 94 starts, including seven in centerfield, for the Pirates. He hit .255 with 3 home runs, 43 RBI, and had 14 stolen bases in 21 attempts.

LHP Sang-Hoon Lee

The Red Sox signed Korean LHP Sang-Hoon Lee to a two-year deal on December 23, 1999. Lee, 28, has pitched for Chunichi Dragons of Japan's Central League the past two seasons.

"Sang Lee is the best left-handed pitcher in Korea and has been both a top starter and reliever in the Korean League," said Duquette. "He provides us with additional depth on our staff, particularly left-handed depth, which is very valuable as there is a premium for lefties in the majors. We have been following Lee for a long period of time and attempted to sign him two years ago from the LG Twins in Korea, but were unsuccessful in securing the appropriate official approvals. There was a good deal of competition recently among more than a half-dozen major league clubs vying to sign Lee and we are pleased that he'll be in a Red Sox uniform."

The 6-1, 190-pounder earned the equivalent of the Cy Young Award in 1995 as the Korean League's "MVP of the Year" after he finished the season with a 20-5, 2.01 record in 30 appearances for the LG Twins. That year Lee pitched 228.2 innings and struck out 142 batters (150 H, 51 ER, 51 BB). In 1997 with the LG Twins, he won the Korean League's top reliever of the year award, "The Best Save Pitcher Award," after recording a league-best 37 saves in 57 appearances and finishing with a 10-6, 2.11 record (85.1 IP, 56 H, 20 ER, 27 BB, 103 K). After the Red Sox and Lee were unsuccessful in securing the necessary approvals on a contract following the 1997 season, he signed with the Chunichi Dragons. Overall, during the 1998-99 seasons with Chunichi, Lee was 7-5, 3.30 with three saves in 47 appearances, including 16 starts (128 IP, 107 H, 47 ER, 14 HR, 42 BB, 98 K). Lee was born in Seoul, South Korea and was a member of the Korean National Baseball Team in 1990. The left-hander signed with the LG Twins organization in 1992. Lee's 18 wins in 1994 and his 20 wins in 1995 led the league. He also had a .800 winning percentage in 1995, which was also the best in the Korean League.

In 1986, the Sox won an M.L. record 24-10 in 1 run games.

RHP Paxton Crawford

The Red Sox selected RHP Paxton Crawford in the 10th round of the 1995 June draft. Last season with Trenton (AA), Crawford went 7-8, 4.08 in 28 games started in 163.1 innings pitched (81 R, 74 ER, 59 BB, 111 K). He tossed the Thunder's first complete game shutout of the year on June 16 at Bowie. After that shutout vs. Bowie, his ERA was 2.06 over his last 13 starts, while compiling a 5-3 with five no-decisions. The Thunder went 16-12 over Crawford's 28 starts and his offense averaged 5.1 runs per start. Crawford has allowed 13 earned runs in his last 21.1 innings. Crawford went 2-1 with a 2.11 ERA in July allowing just 14 walks and he struck out 29. He held the opposition to a .199 batting average in July. In his five starts in August, Crawford went 2-1 with a 2.05 ERA. The right-hander tossed 39.2 innings in August allowing just nine earned runs, 11 walks and 29 strikeouts. Overall, Crawford held opponents to a .245 batting average and did not allow a home run in his last nine regular season starts (since July 20th). The 6-3, 193-pounder was 6-5, 4.17 in 20 starts for Trenton in 1998 (108 IP, 104 H, 53 R, 50 ER, 39 BB, 82 K) and was a member of the Double-A Association All-Star Team but did not pitch in the game.

RHP Jason Sekany

The Red Sox selected RHP Jason Sekany with the fourth pick of the 2nd round in the 1996 June draft. Sekany went 14-4 with a 3.35 ERA in 27 games and 22 starts for Trenton (AA) in 1999. The 14 wins by Sekany were the most by a Trenton pitcher since Carl Pavano won 16 in 1996. His win on September 8 was his sixth win in his last nine games pitched and he did not lose a regular season game after July 15. He hurled three complete games in 161.1 innings pitched (65 R, 60 ER, 64 BB, 116 K). Three of his four losses came in June as he went a combined 7-1 in April, May and July. In addition the right-hander went 5-0, 165 in August. Sekany also made a spot start for Pawtucket (AAA) on July 21 vs. Charlotte (5.2 IP, 7 H, 4 R, 3 ER, 4 BB, 1 K). Sekany allowed just three earned runs in his last 44.1 innings pitched, and no home runs since August 7 (last 44 innings). Opponents batted just .240 against Sekany during the regular season. Sekany also went 1-1, 6.55 for the Thunder in the Northern Division Championship Series vs. Norwich.

LHP Tim Young

Major League Baseball's "Proving Ground" The Arizona Fall League

Each year since its inception in 1992, the Arizona Fall League has served as an off-season development ground for some of the best young prospects from all of baseball. The Arizona Fall League's 1999 season closed out the century for Major League Baseball by continuing the development of its best prospects. This year's class of "Fall-Ball" participants included a record 35 first-round draft picks.

In 1992 the Arizona Fall League was created under the direction and guidance of current Red Sox Vice President of Baseball Operations Mike Port, who served as the league's President. The Arizona Fall League has helped develop some of the greatest names in the majors, a solid measurement of the league's success. At no time was the A.F.L.'s success rate more evident than the 1999 season, when 443 of the 1,208 big-league players (37%) had polished their skills at one time or another playing "Fall-Ball" in the A.F.L.

The 1998 Arizona Fall League season alone produced 45 Major Leaguers last season, including Cincinnati's Scott Williamson, the National League Rookie of the Year. Williamson, who pitched for the Maryvale Saguaros in the A.F.L., is the eighth Arizona Fall League alumnus to earn Rookie of the Year honors. The others are Boston's Nomar Garciaparra (1997), Mike Piazza (L.A. - '93), Bob Hamelin (K.C. - '94), Boston's Marty Cordova (Min. - '95), Todd Hollandsworth (L.A. - '96), Derek Jeter (N.Y.Y. - '96), and Ben Grieve (Oak. - '98). Florida's Preston Wilson and the Pirates' Warren Morris, the second and third-place vote getters in the 1999 N.L. Rookie of the Year balloting, are also both A.F.L. alumni.

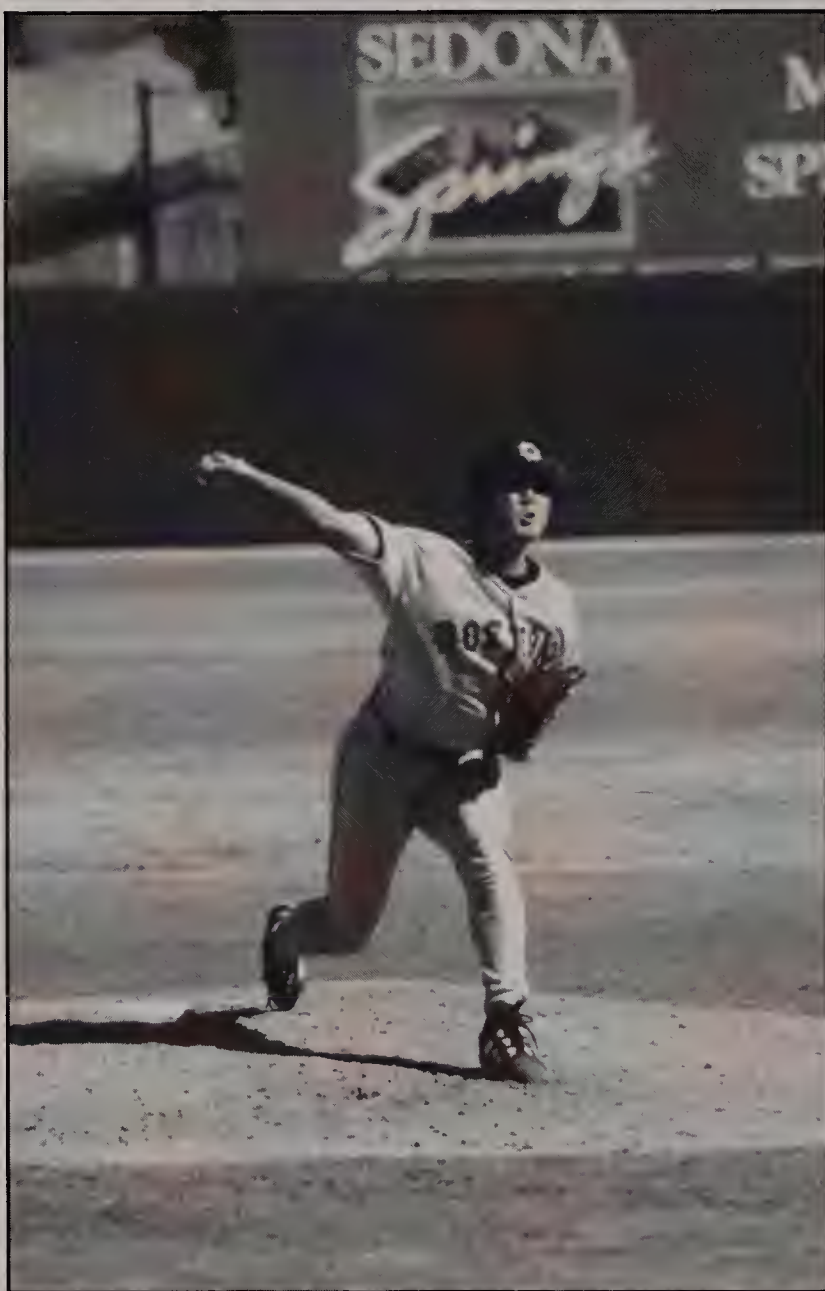

This past Arizona Fall League season had a definite Red Sox flavor as five current Boston prospects led the Mesa Solar Sox to the League Championship. Red Sox right-handed prospect Sun-Woo Kim led the Solar Sox through the regular fall season and then the playoffs against the Western Division's champs, the Saguaros. Kim emerged as one of the A.F.L.'s most impressive pitchers. Kim finished with a 5-1, 2.27 record (31.2 IP, 7 BB, 31 K). His five wins tied for the league lead and his ERA was sixth best. Kim yielded only 19 hits to opposing batters, who hit a mere .171 against him. Red Sox right-handed farm-hands Paxton Crawford and Jeff Taglienti also had impressive stints in Arizona. Crawford was 3-0, 5.79 in 23.1 innings (9 BB, 16 K). Taglienti finished with a 3-1-2, 5.01 record in 23.1 innings. He fanned 22 while only walking four batters.

Catcher Steve Lomasney, a Peabody, MA native, was the Red Sox offensive standout in the A.F.L. this year. He led the Solar Sox with six homers, recorded a .284 average, scored 20 runs, and drove in 21 runners. Infielder David Eckstein's defense at second base also helped lead the Solar Sox' championship run as he committed only one error during the whole season. Eckstein hit .265 with 19 runs and 11 RBI.

The Arizona Fall League has helped develop some of the best talent in all of Major League Baseball. The A.F.L. has served as a proving ground for baseball's best, and some of the best current and future stars of the Boston Red Sox are the league's model alumni.

The 1999 Season of Baseball's Most Dominant Pitcher, Pedro Martinez

When describing Pedro Martinez, the name of Cy Young is certain to come up as a point of comparison. Many consider Cy Young to be the greatest pitcher of all time and there is little doubt among knowledgeable baseball fans that Pedro is the most dominant pitcher in modern day baseball. In addition to talent, the two pitchers also have something else in common. They are the ONLY Red Sox pitchers to lead the American League in wins, strikeouts and ERA. In fact, Martinez and Young are the only pitchers from the same team ever to accomplish that feat in the history of the A.L. Grover Alexander and Steve Carlton of the Phillies and Alexander, again, and Hippo Vaughn of the Cubs have also won the "Triple Crown" pitching for the same team in the National League.

The season that Pedro had last year for the Red Sox was nothing short of spectacular. The 28-year old native of Manoguayabo, Dominican Republic was awarded the 1999 A.L. Cy Young Award, becoming just the third pitcher in Major League history to win the award in both leagues.

"The first one is really special," said Martinez. "This one (being) in the American League also makes it special, in another league. I know this is a different league. You probably face a lot more offense than the N.L. It's always special...it doesn't matter how or when you get it."

Unfortunately, Martinez fell just short of winning the A.L.'s Most Valuable Player Award. Red Sox fans felt that an injustice had been done. Pedro fell 13 points shy of winning the award that went to Ivan Rodriguez of Texas. "I'm not disappointed at all," reacted Pedro. "Everybody who was in the pile was good enough to be MVP, so I don't hold anything against anybody. There's nothing I can do. If they don't want to vote, it's up to them. I know what my concern is with my team and the things I have to do and I did what I had to do to win the Cy Young (Award) and that to me is good enough."

The number of Pedro's individual accomplishments during the 1999 season was astounding. He won the "Triple Crown" of pitching with a league-leading 23 wins, 313 strikeouts and an ERA of 2.07.

Pedro's .852 winning percentage (23-4) placed him third on the Red Sox all-time win/loss percentage list behind "Smoky" Joe Wood (34-5 for a .872% in 1912) and Roger Clemens (24-4 .857% in 1986). Last year also marked the second time that Martinez struck out 300 or more in a season (1997 with Montreal was the other time) and he became the first A.L. pitcher to record 300 or more strikeouts in a season since Randy Johnson in 1993. The 313 strikeouts put Pedro into baseball's elite pitching fraternity, as he became just the 14th pitcher in major league history to hit the 300 mark. He is just the ninth pitcher to fan 300 or more in a season more than once. The hard-throwing Martinez also joins Randy Johnson as the only two pitchers in major league history to record 300 or more strikeouts in both leagues. Martinez was so dominant in 1999 that he struck out the side 18 times. Of his 313 strikeouts, 250 were swinging and 63 were called third strikes. Boston's ace also punched out 10 or more batters in a game 19 times last season. His 313 strikeouts also set a Red Sox single-season record.

The spotlight shined especially bright on Pedro during the 1999 All-Star Game, hosted by the Red Sox, and during the Red Sox post-season in the A.L. Division and League Championship Series. In the Mid-Summer Classic, Pedro delighted the hometown faithful by striking out Barry Larkin, Larry Walker, Sammy Sosa and Mark McGwire to start the game, setting an All-Star game record by striking out the first four batters faced. For his efforts in the A.L.'s victory, Pedro was named the game's Most Valuable Player. After the All-Star Classic, Martinez continued to dominate the best A.L. offenses. Facing the Yankees, Indians, and Rangers — the three A.L. Division winners — Martinez was 5-0 with a 1.87 ERA. On September 10 at New York, Pedro set a career-high with 17 strikeouts in a 3-1 complete game victory. The 17 strikeouts were the most by an opposing pitcher against New York in their history. Martinez was also a four-time recipient of the AL Pitcher of the Month Award (April, May, June and September), becoming the only pitcher to ever win the award four times in a season.

Red Sox fans will forever remember Pedro for his legendary heroics during the Red Sox' 1999 post-season run. He started Game 1 of the Division Series in Cleveland with three innings of shut-out ball. In the fourth inning, Martinez struck out Jim Thome and felt discomfort in his upper back. He finished the inning but was removed from the game. The diagnosis was a back strain, and there was serious doubt that Martinez could pitch in the rest of the series. The Red Sox, who had trailed 2-0 in the series, managed to rebound to tie the series with two stirring wins at Fenway to force a fifth game in Cleveland. The question on every fan's mind before Game 5 was whether or not Pedro was healthy enough to make an appearance to help beat Cleveland. The deciding game of the series was a seesaw battle in which the first four innings saw three lead changes. With the game tied at 8-8, Manager Jimmy Williams summoned Martinez from the bullpen. "I had doubts about my feelings out there," said Martinez. "Once I stepped on the mound, I never did. I just wanted to get the adrenaline going and get the mind going and hopefully that would drive me to just throw the ball over the plate and see what I could do." Martinez was spectacular as he shut down the potent Indian lineup. He did not allow a hit and struck out eight batters as the Red Sox rallied behind Troy O'Leary's clutch three-run homer in the seventh inning. Boston took a 12-8 lead into the bottom of the ninth inning and Martinez, in grand fashion, struck out Omar Vizquel for the final out to win the game and send Boston to the A.L.C.S.

Martinez's post-season success did not stop there as the Red Sox met the New York Yankees in the A.L.C.S. New York managed to win two close games to take a 2-0 lead over Boston. Martinez took the ball for Boston in Game #3 against Clemens and put the Red Sox back in the series with a scintillating seven inning, two-hit, 12-strikeout performance in Boston's 13-1 win. It was a victory that Red Sox fans will always relish. The 13 strikeouts were the most by an opposing pitcher against the Yankees in their post-season history. Despite the Red Sox falling short in the series, Martinez ended his post-season 2-0 in three games in 17 innings pitched. Martinez allowed just five hits, no runs, no unearned runs, six walks and an incredible 23 strikeouts.

As impressive as Pedro's individual performance was in 1999, he was more pleased with the Red Sox success as a team in 1999. The individual accomplishments are important, but, Pedro would much rather accomplish the Red Sox team goal — winning a World Series Championship. "I would like to thank my teammates for the great memories," Pedro said when reflecting on the season and playoffs. "I spent six years with other teams like Los Angeles and Montreal and I never had the chance...the thrill to see what it was like in the playoffs. Now I've had the thrill twice (1998-1999); now I want something else."

International Impact

Many insightful members of the baseball community have theorized that the future success of Major League baseball teams lies in their international scouting efforts. The numbers, according to the Baseball Commissioner's Office, support this theory—21.2 percent of the 841 players (750 active and 91 disabled) on 1999 Opening Day rosters were born outside of the U.S. The Red Sox have been a leader in this trend.

Since Executive Vice President and General Manager Dan Duquette joined the Red Sox in 1994, aggressive international scouting has been a crucial part of the baseball operations renaissance that has occurred in Boston. Scouting and signing the top players from the United States and from around the world has been an important ingredient in the recipe for building the championship-caliber ballclub that Red Sox fans currently enjoy. The Boston Red Sox have become a leader in the international scouting market.

Shortly after joining the Red Sox, Dan Duquette hired Ray Poitevint as the Executive Director of International Baseball Operations, marking Boston's first major step into international waters. With a significant number of scouts now working strictly in foreign markets, the Red Sox have established themselves as a major force in the international baseball arena. The investment the team has made into building a superior international scouting network is clearly paying off.

If you look at the 2000 Red Sox roster and list of spring training invitees, 17 of the 56 players — 32 percent — were born outside of the U.S. Compare that figure to the 18 percent of foreign-born players that were at spring training in 1994 as Duquette was beginning his tenure in Boston.

"It's an interesting team in that there's a number of different cultures coming together," Duquette said. "We've worked hard at educating other people in the organization about what's important to people from other cultures. And we've presented a culture of tolerance among our staff members throughout our organization."

"Dan Duquette really energized our international scouting efforts," says Red Sox Director of Player Development Kent Qualls. "Surveys show that 20% of the players in the Major Leagues are international, so if you are going to ignore foreign talent, you are going to miss a big part of the talent pool."

One of the locations in which the Red Sox have significantly increased their presence is Latin America, with particular success in the Dominican Republic. The Red Sox have a strong team entered in the Dominican Summer League, the San Pedro Red Sox. Dave Jauss, Boston's Minor League Field Coordinator, managed the Licey Tigers to a Caribbean World Series in the Dominican Winter League in 1999. There's the Red Sox baseball academy operated with the Japanese team Hiroshima Toyo Carp. And then there's the fact that a certain pitcher from the Dominican named Pedro Martinez wears a Red Sox cap...and kids all over the Dominican want to be just like their hero, Pedro.

"Martinez gave us instant recognition and credibility in the Dominican," said Duquette. "After we signed him, he brought Red Sox hats back to his family and friends. He has helped a lot of people back there and plans to do more. He is regarded as a hero in his country, not only because of his baseball skills, but also because of what he gives back to his community."

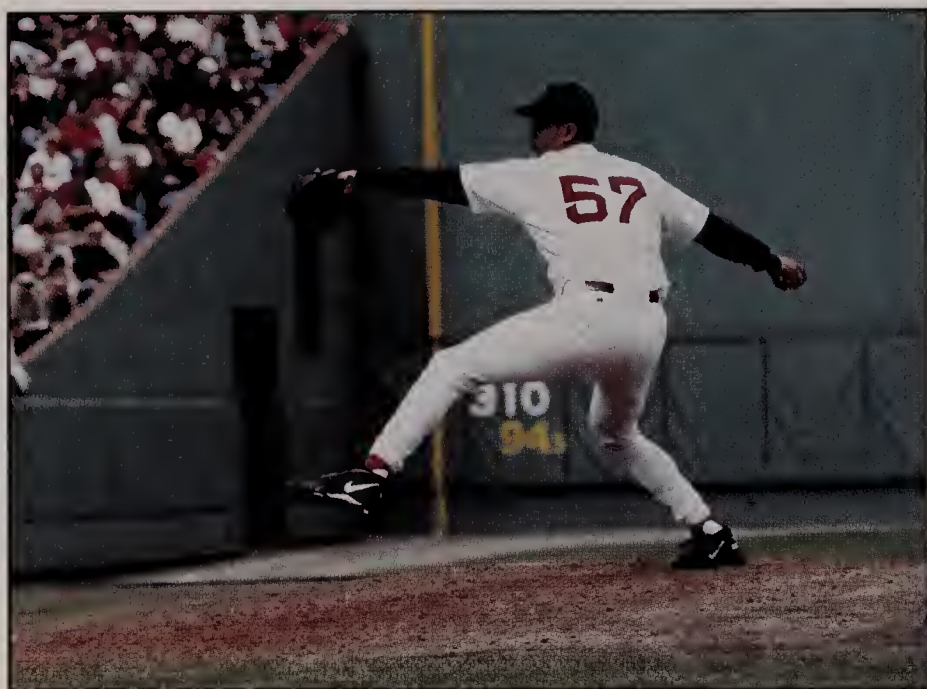

Levy Ochoa, who signed shortstop Edgar Renteria out of Colombia when he worked for the Marlins, heads the Red Sox Latin American operations. Nelson Norman is the manager of the San Pedro Red Sox, and oversees the development of the young players. The Red Sox also have a scouting presence in Venezuela and Curacao.

Of the players at major league camp in spring training this year, two hail from Venezuela — pitcher Rich Garces and catcher Luis Rodriguez — and ten hail from the Dominican Republic: Pedro Martinez, Ramon Martinez, Jose Offerman, newly acquired infielder Manny Alexander, rookie standouts Juan Pena and Wilton Veras, Fernando De La Cruz, Dario Perez, Julio Santana, and Israel Alcantara. All have excellent baseball ability.

Garces (1.55 ERA, 40.2 IP) appeared in 30 games for the Sox in 1999, notching a 5-1 record with two saves. He provided some clutch relief during the postseason, and won Game 4 against Cleveland in the American League Division Series. Last year, Rodriguez batted .289 (31 G, 14 RBI, 8 2B, 3 HR, 5 SB) with Sarasota and .272 (32 G, 14 RBI, 7 2B, 4 HR, 2 SB) with Trenton. Juan Pena made two starts with Boston in 1999, pitching 13.0 innings for an impressive 0.69 ERA (9H, 1 ER, 15 K, 3 BB). He became the first Sox starter to win his first two Major League games since Vaughn Eschelman in 1995, and also the first Red Sox pitcher to strike out eight batters in his major league debut since Aaron Sele accomplished the feat in 1993. In 1998 against the Durham Bulls, Pena threw a no-hitter — only the third, nine-inning no-hitter in Pawtucket (Triple-A) Red Sox history.

RHP Jin Ho Cho was the first Korean to appear for the Red Sox

RHP Juan Pena made several impressive starts for Boston in 1999

Third baseman Wilton Veras was called up from Double-A Trenton last year to Boston to fill in for an injured John Valentin. In 36 games with the Red Sox, he hit .288 (34-for-118, 14 R, 13 RBI) with five doubles, one triple, and two home runs. While playing with Trenton, Veras drove in 75 runs, scored 65, and had a .281 average (133-for-474) in 116 games.

The Red Sox have also aggressively scouted talent in the Far East. The Red Sox have delved far deeper into the Asian market than any other team, signing several top Korean and Japanese players.

Sun Woo Kim was the first Korean-born player to sign with the Red Sox organization. Kim, who pitched for Korea in the World Youth Baseball Championships in 1995 at Fenway Park, was so impressed with Boston, Fenway Park and the Red Sox that he took a handful of dirt from the pitchers mound and vowed to his teammates and family that he would return some day and pitch for the Boston Red Sox. In Trenton last year, the right-hander started 26 games last year in Trenton, compiling a 9-8 record with a 4.89 ERA (149.0 IP, 44 BB, 149 K).

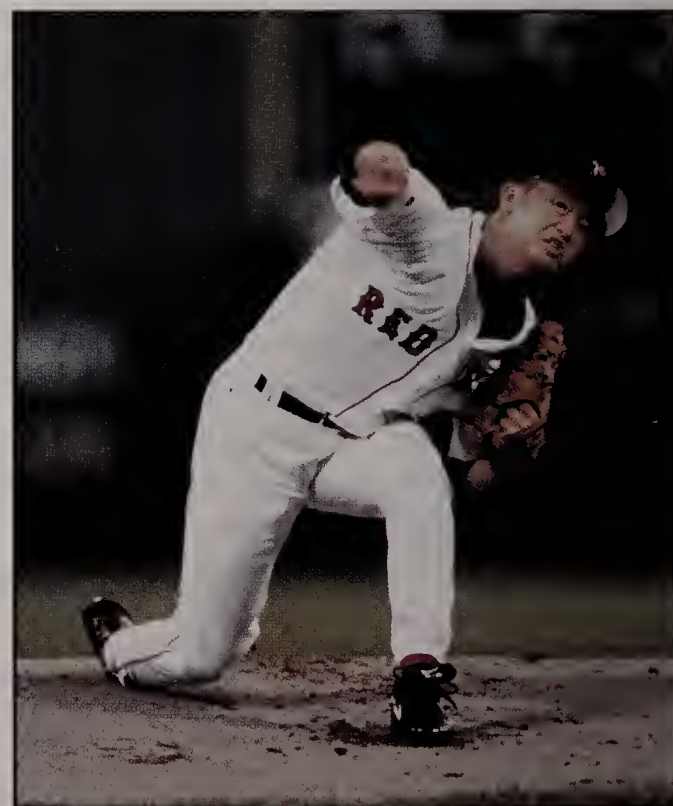

One of Kim's teammates on the 1996 Korean Olympic Team became the first Korean player ever to appear for the Red Sox. Jin Ho Cho made his Major League debut in 1998 after being called up from Trenton (Double-A). Last season, Cho made appearances with both Boston and Pawtucket. He ended the season with a 9-3 record and a 3.45 ERA (17 G, 4 CG, 109.2 IP, 29 BB, 80 K) in Pawtucket.

One of the newest — and most interesting — additions to the Red Sox for the 2000 season is top Korean pitcher Sang-Hoon Lee. The 28-year old lefty was 20-5 as a starter in 1995 when he earned Korean Most Valuable Player award, Gold Glove, and best pitcher honors. In 1997, he had 37 saves and was selected the reliever of the year. Last year, he was 6-5 with a 2.83 ERA last season with the Chunichi Dragons in Japan.

Tomokazu Ohka, who was promoted to Boston's roster late in the season, was a perfect 7-0 with a 1.58 ERA in 12 starts for Pawtucket, after going 8-0 with a 3.00 ERA in 12 starts for Trenton to begin the season. The Kyoto, Japan native was a combined 15-0 with a 2.31 ERA (140.1 IP, 36 ER) in the minors this season, posting the best ERA and tying him for most wins in the system. The 23-year old right-hander was selected to play in the first-ever Futures All-Star Game, and he started and won the Alumni Game for Boston at Pawtucket on June 3.

Red Sox fans will soon be hearing about many of the other young prospects signed from the international arena. Luis Perez, who posted a 6-6 record with a miniscule 1.94 ERA (69.2 IP, 15 ER) in 13 starts, including the only complete game shutout of the season for the San Pedro Red Sox. The left-hander struck out 107 batters and walked 30, for an impressive 3.6 strikeout to walk ratio. Infielder Tony Blanco batted .277 (69-249) and led the San Pedro Red Sox with 249 at bats, 12 doubles, 5 triples, 8 home runs, 41 RBI, and a .462 slugging percentage. A young shortstop named Cesar Saba had everyone who saw him at Single-A Lowell last summer buzzing. Fans will also enjoy watching highly touted prospect Julio Guerrero, brother of Montreal Expos star Vladimir Guerrero.

In his first season in the Red Sox organization, Seung Song finished fifth in the Gulf Coast League with a 2.30 ERA (54.2 IP, 14 ER) and third with 61 strikeouts. Song, the number one pick from 1998's Korean Amateur Draft, posted a 5-5 record for the GCL Sox, the league's top pitching staff (3.03 ERA in 70 games). Outfielder Ken Kawabata batted .297 (43-145) in 46 games with the GCL Red Sox. The 20-year-old switch-hitter finished fourth in the league with a .432 on-base percentage, and first on his team with 4 triples, 31 walks, and 15 stolen bases in 19 attempts.

The Red Sox continue to strive to put a championship-caliber team on the field year in and year out, and this mission is evident in the Red Sox aggressive and successful efforts to sign many of the most promising players from all over the world.

The Backbone of Baseball Operations: The Work Of "The Scouts"

By Dan Duquette, Executive Vice President and General Manager

If you ask a veteran baseball man to identify the single most important element of a successful ballclub, invariably you will hear about the value of "The Scouts." By definition, a good scout is an imaginative, courageous, objective talent hunter who can accurately qualify a player's skill level and systematically project, with accuracy, how that player will help your club win games. Good scouting helps the team assess the value of each player contract in the marketplace. In short, if you want to field a competitive nine, you need people that can tell you who can play.

It sounds like an easy job to recommend ballplayers, and sometimes is, like the rare opportunity when you find an elite player so naturally gifted and driven to succeed that he seamlessly travels from the sandlot to the Big Leagues. Al Kaline followed this career path with the Tigers in the 50's, our beloved Tony C did this with the Red Sox in the 60's, and most recently Orlando Hernandez followed this same route for the Yankees. More often, though, scouting recommendations take more time for clubs to realize a return on their investment, if at all, because players are human. The biggest challenge of scouting is to predict how players will respond in a new job, with a new boss, sometimes in a new country with a different culture, and, almost always, these challenges are in complete view of the public. Like scouting recommendations, scouting judgment is also dependent upon people and their value judgments. There are more times than each of us would like to admit, when our scouting recommendations failed us and we were hesitant—"gun shy" if you will—to sign new players for our team. Despite these challenges, The Scouts do a wonderful service for baseball because they recruit our most important asset, Major League players.

As GM of the Milwaukee Brewers in the 80's, Harry Dalton required that I travel with his best scouts so I could learn their personal evaluation methods in their respective areas of expertise: Walter Youse-amateur free agents; Ray Poitevint-International Scouting; Walter Shannon-Minor League personnel; and Ray Scarborough-Major League scouting. These men taught the fundamentals of good scouting. Today, I hear them at every game I watch and heed their advice whenever I research a scouting report for a potential deal. Gentlemen—thank you for having the patience to instruct others; you generously passed on your wealth of knowledge to another generation.

The Dalton Gang represent all The Scouts at all levels of the game who selflessly serve their teams and Major League Baseball. I would particularly like to take this opportunity to recognize the Scout of the Year Program for honoring the scouting profession because they make an annual commitment of their time and talent to perpetuate our livelihood.
